Helene of Seattle
Poor Kangaroo Baby
With Bow and Arrow
Earth's Greatest News

—By Arthur Brisbane—

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., Aug 15—Helene Madison, of Seattle, champion woman swimmer of the world, is at present, 4 p. m., swimming and diving in the pool on this ranch. She flew up from Los Angeles this morning with Royal Brougham, of the Seattle Post Intelligencer, and tall, young Mr. Schwegler, saw the pool, and said: "I want to swim."

The London omnibus driver spent his one holiday in the year riding over his own route, beside another bus driver, enjoying the fact that he was not driving. Helene Madison enjoys the fact that she is swimming, but not racing. In training she is not allowed to dive, for that stiffens the ankles that must be absolutely loose and relaxed for the crawl stroke.

You would travel a long way to see that girl champion swim 50 yards at top speed, or dive, "swan" fashion, and rise with half her body out of water.

Mr. Schwegler, young Seattle giant 6 feet 4, 210 pounds, swam against Miss Madison and did not win, although he had two seconds start in 50 yards and she seemed not anxious to beat him.

It would have delighted any eugenist to see that young couple. Her last race of the Olympics did not seem to satisfy Miss Madison.

"I could not seem to get going in the 400 meters," said she. However, she got going well enough to win the race against the best women swimmers of the world, and set a new world record.

Canada's agreement with Great Britain on tariff and business preferences are published and show that the "trade within the empire" plan has reality back of it.

Canada sells to this country more than to all the British Empire, and must have considered carefully the probable consequences of making ours a decidedly less favored nation.

Production of white paper from quick growing pine in the South, needing only 11 years for regrowth, against 30 years for northern forests, is one of the things to be considered.

Baby kangaroos born here this spring are learning how some of our best stock speculators have felt since 1929.

At first, the little kangaroo lives in a pouch on its mother's front, just below the forelegs. As time passes, the baby gets bigger, the pouch does not, and finally the kangaroo baby finds that he can no longer climb into the pouch. His struggles are pathetic, something like a speculator trying to even up.

Finally he decides to be a kangaroo on his own account. The speculator must do the same.

In Cannes, on the edge of the blue little Mediterranean, a monkey escaped from a gypsy camp, went to a fashionable tennis club and immediately bit Miss Rosizka Dolly, one of the famous dancing twins, and Miss Peggy Joyce, also well known.

Walter Howey, who is here, says Darwin will be interested in that. If he had not been man's half brother, the monkey could not possibly have had the intelligence and artistic taste to pick out Miss Roszika and Miss Peggy, when the whole Riviera was before him, to bite.

Twenty miles back in the mountains two bow and arrow enthusiasts, Howard Hill of Alabama and Opalaka, Florida, and a young friend, are proving that the arrow will do all that bullets can do, by shooting deer, coyotes and other game.

The arrow will kill at 150 yards. Unlike the rifle, it makes no noise, does not frighten other deer in the herd, and the stricken deer, not knowing whence the blow comes, will often stand, awaiting the second arrow.

Nothing is more dreadful than killing beautiful inoffensive creatures, but men's lives have depended on successful killing for a million years, and with youth, as with the adults that have never matured, it is useless to protest.

As was to be expected, the Republican party will continue to be the prohibition party, in a feeble way. Dr. Poling, head of the prohibition forces, says he will stand with the Republicans, because Republican victory "will safeguard some of the gains made under the Eighteenth Amendment."

Let us hope it will not safeguard the gains in bootlegging, racketeering, gangster crime and drunkenness among children.

A new Hapsburger baby is born, Prince Stefan, grandson of Queen Marie of Rumania, son of Archduke Anton of Hapsburg and Princess Ileana of Rumania.

As a prince, the baby will probably not be important. Few thrones will be inhabited when he is full grown, and many more princes may be working in Henry Ford's factory.

Most interesting about this new Hapsburg is the fact that his own mother nurses him. The

Mayor Refutes Charge Missing Sherwood Was His Agent; Explains $50,000 Checks

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 16—Governor Roosevelt's investigation of Mayor Walker today probed close to the identity of the "unknown person" who figures in the inquiry when the mayor revealed that the mysterious recipient of money was a woman.

When Gov. Roosevelt observed the evidence showed a letter of credit for $10,000 was arranged for the same "unknown person" to whom Russell T. Sherwood, missing accountant, paid $7,500, Walker said:

"I know nothing about the letter of credit. I do know that Sherwood handled income matters for the 'unknown person' and an examination of her accounts would show she had several bank accounts in the city."

The identity of the "unknown person" has been scrupulously guarded by Samuel Seabury, investigator for the Hofstadter legislative committee.

Weston Allen Accused in Estate Suit

Former Attorney General J. Weston Alen was charged with "improper investment" of a $130,000 estate today in Dedham court in a petition for him removal as trustee, brought by Edna G. Wadsworth of Boston.

Allen is trustee of the P. Briggs Wadsworth estate, of which Miss Wadsworth is one of many beneficiaries.

"Certain personal property that has not been sold, distributed or accounted for and he has allowed improper investment of other parts of the estate," the petition of Miss Wadsworth read.

"Certain bills and obligations have accrued against the estate that shouldn't have and, through improper management, unnecessary bills are being incurred."

Miss Wadsworth also charged that allen advanced sums of money to other beneficiaries of the estate and charged interest upon the advances. He also paid other beneficiaries varying sums instead of equal amounts, alleged to have been provided in the will.

She said Allen was ordered by the court to render an accounting of the estate before last May 18 but failed to do so, and has since ignored an order of the court to comply.

The accounts of the estate were kept in such "an involved manner" that she was unable to ascertain the true condition, she charged.

Henry W. Packer, law partner of Allen, with an office in the Tremont Building, filed a motion for specifications soon after Miss Wadsworth's petition was filed.

The case will be heard in Suffolk court next Monday, with Atty. R. J. Lane of 18 Tremont st., counsel for Miss Wadsworth.

CURLEY MAPS DOLE BOARD SHAKEUP

Jobless in Malden, Everett Demand Aid, Ouster of Relief Chief; Ban Fraud Gag

The Boston public welfare department will be completely reorganized by Mayor Curley within a month, it was revealed today, while police continued their investigation of relief frauds, first exposed exclusively in the Boston Evening American.

Plans for the reorganization are now being perfected and will be based on a survey, covering nearly two years, which was made by a special investigator for the mayor, it was learned.

Until the plans are complete, they will remain a secret known only to a few officials, but it was learned authoritatively that the shakeup will take place before the middle of September.

WIDESPREAD FRAUDS

A conference at police headquarters today between Police Commissioner Hultman and four members of the overseers of the public welfare is understood to have brought out the fact that welfare racketeering in Boston is of far greater proportions than officials imagined.

Today's conference followed one between Hultman and Chairman

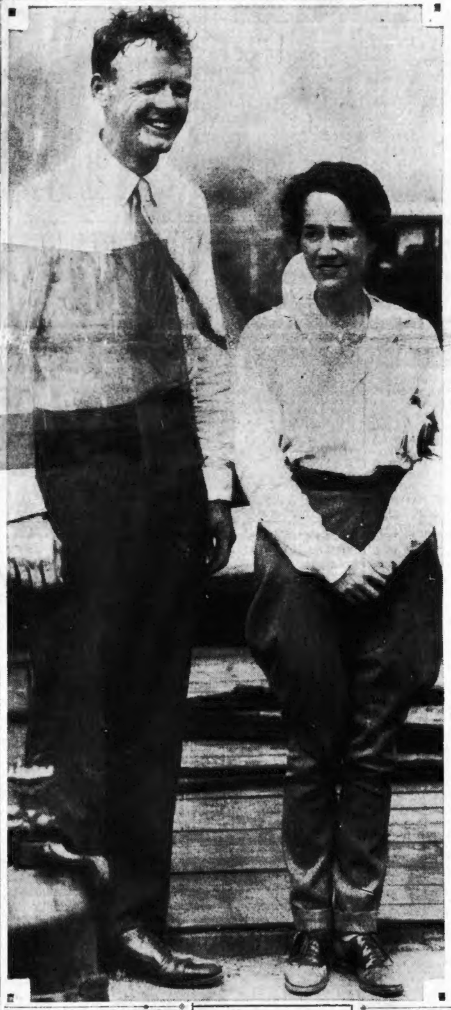
Another Little Eaglet Rests in Anne's Arms



No longer desolate is the nest from which the first-born eaglet was stolen. The world that sorrowed with them rejoices today with Col. and Anne Lindbergh. In his infinite wisdom the old stork made it another boy. It has been many a long month since this picture of Anne and Charles was taken. It has been many a long month since they smiled. Yet time heals all sorrow and a long interlude of agony dims with the first flutter of new wings and a baby's cry. Today the colonel chuckles when he verifies the glad news and Anne, her hour past, cuddles the new little mite close to her breast, shedding glad tears for the new one that has come and bitter tears for the one that is lost to her forever.

BETTY GOW EXPECTED TO NURSE NEW BABY

Colonel Chuckles on Telephone as He Verifies News That Another Boy Has Arrived

Englewood, N. J., Aug. 16—Anne Lindbergh gave birth to a son at 7.30 this morning in her mother's home, five months and 16 days after her first-born was kidnaped. Mother and child are doing well.

This sudden news was flashed around the world this morning, waking a flood of renewed sympathy for the tragically bereaved mother of a few months ago, now a mother once more, Lindbergh's son once again in her arms, and thankfulness in her heart that the tragedy of her first child has not robbed her of her second.

Shortly after the birth of the child, Col. Lindbergh verified by telephone the birth of his second son. He chuckled happily as congratulations were given him.

The news of the birth was also confirmed by Dr. E. M. Hawks, one of the attending physicians. He announced the birth of a son to Mrs. Lindbergh and added:

"All other information will have to come from the Lindbergh family."

Dr. E. H. Dennen, who assisted Dr. Hawks, also confirmed the news.

Betty Gow to Be Nurse for New Baby

The child was born in the Dwight W. Morrow home, where the first baby was born, and Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, was present, having recently returned from Europe.

No statement was forthcoming on this point, but the probability was considered that the new baby's nurse would be Betty Gow, the Scottish girl who was the first baby's nurse and who first discovered the kidnaping.

Overnight the Lindbergh family have "come back." After months of grief and retirement in their Englewood home, Col. Lindbergh unexpectedly turned up at Newark airport yesterday and flew for the first time since he ceased search-

Livermore Assents to Wife's Divorce Plan

Jesse L. Livermore, the one-time "boy plunger of Wall st.," who went from Boston to New York and amazed bulls and bears by his prowess, confirmed today in Chicago reports that his wife will file suit for divorce in Reno.

Mrs. Livermore, the former Dorothy Fox Wendt, Manhattan show girl, cabaret singer and movie actress, is already in Reno.

"We have been separated more than a year," Livermore said. "A final settlement, mutually agreeable, has been made.

"Mrs. Livermore is a splendid woman and we both tried sincerely to harmonize our conflicting views and personalities."

They were married in December 1918, on the day after he was divorced at Reno by his first wife, the former Nettie Jordan of Somerville, sister of Chester S. Jordan, who was executed in State Prison a quarter of a century ago for murdering his wife, cutting up her body and attempting to ship the remains out of Boston in a trunk, only to be foiled and brought to justice by Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley, then a sergeant.

Mrs. Livermore, the second, was only 23 and Livermore was 41 when they were married at the old St. Regis Hotel in New York.

Livermore is a native of South Acton and worked for stock brokers in Worcester and Boston before going to New York and plunging in the market after his first marriage. He went "broke" and his wife returned to work as a stenographer. Then, on a "shoestring" of $3.12, he started his march to fame and fortune in stock manipulations.

MARKET AGAIN SURGES AHEAD

The stock market met occasional flurries of profit-taking, which pared down the extreme gains, but a number of the rails, and a few industrials, pushed up to new high levels for the summer recovery, having more than erased the losses of last week's setback.

The bond market also moved ahead. While larger advances appeared in the more speculative issues, particularly among the rails, the general list was higher.

Cotton featured the commodities, moving up nearly $1 a bale to new highs. Sugar, lead, silver, rubber and several other lines were somewhat higher. Wheat, after advancing about a cent a bushel, lost part of its rise.

Stocks had a buoyant ouening, when trading hit a feverish poce, but during the next three hours, the general list failed to equal the high levels of the first few minutes, although a number of the rails were bid up smartly in the middle of the day. Extreme advances of $1 to $7 a share were reduced from 1 to $3 by profit-taking here and there, although the list turned dull on the decline.

MAYNARD PREDICTS RECORD PLURALITY FOR ELY

Governor's Re-election and the Nailing of "Whispers" Help Roosevelt Ticket, He Adds

New York, Aug. 16 (INS)—Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts will be re-elected by the largest plurality ever given a Democratic candidate for governor, in the opinion of Joseph A. Maynard of Boston, Democratic state chairman.

This, he said here today, will be a great help in carrying Massachusetts for the Democratic Presidential and vice-presidential nominees, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Speaker John N. Garner.

Maynard added:

"It is my prediction that they will carry our state by a plurality of at least 25,000 votes. We also expect to elect three additional Democratic Congressmen, and perhaps four, giving Massachusetts seven, and maybe, eight Democrats in the National House of Representatives.

"I think there is no question whatever but that we will elect a Democratic House of Representatives in Massachusetts and organize it with the election of a Democratic speaker.

PRAISE FOR MISS WARD

"We have more than 1500 candidates for Democratic nominations for State and county offices to be voted on in the State primary on September 20.

"This extraordinarily large field of candidates shows the interest in the Democratic party and the valuation placed on a Democratic nomination this year in Massachusetts.

"We are conducting a very active campaign on registration and organization and are requesting our city and town committees to see to it that their lists be made up of an equal number of women and men workers. The women workers will be under the direction of our efficient Democratic national committeewoman, Miss Mary Ward, who has done splendid work in organizing the women of Massachusetts."

GAINS IN VERMONT

Other visitors here included Park H. Pollard of Proctorsville, State chairman for Vermont, who said:

"While Vermont is a Republican State, I have been surprised at the Roosevelt sentiment that has developed. There has been a great reaction against the Hoover administration."

Robert Gould of Concord, State chairman for New Hampshire, said:

"If the election were tomorrow, Gov. Roosevelt would carry New Hampshire by 10,000 to 15,000 votes and Senator Moses, Republican, would be defeated by ex-Gov. Fred Brown, Democrat, by about the same majority."

John H. Dooley of Portland, State chairman for Maine, said the Democratic party there is well organized and that the people of Maine "are ripe and ready for a change in national administration."

R. I. TO REPEAT 1928

J. Howard McGrath of Central Falls, State chairman for Rhode Island, said organization leaders expect that the November election will repeat that of 1928, "when the State went for Governor Alfred E. Smith by a majority of 2500, first time since the Civil War that Rhode Island had gone Democratic in a two-party contest."

Frank H. Duffy of Rutland, national committeeman for Vermont, said he felt that with the same "loyal support he had in the preconvention campaign Governor Roosevelt should sweep the country."

U. S. CITIZEN IN CHINA SLAIN

Peiping, China, Aug. 16 (AP)—Lieut. Robert H. Soule, assistant military attache at the United States Legation, reported from Sianfu today that Henry Ekval, an American employed by the China United States Motor Company of Hankow, had been slain by Chinese soldiers near Sianfu last month.

Lieut. Soule said his investigation indicated he and two companions had been robbed and murdered by Chinese soldiers who threw the bodies into an abandoned well.

Maynard Blasts Charges That Garner Is Intolerant

Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic state committee returned to Boston today singing the praises of John N. Garner.

"I love the man," said Maynard.

"He commands your affection and respect.

"He's genial, with a ready wit. He's natural. He's a fighter from way back. There's not an intolerant bone in his body. He hates bigotry and sham. He knows his country, and with him in office there'll be none of this secret diplomacy or debt-cancellation schemes. He's a great American and a man's man all through."

ADMIRES FIERY ZEAL

Maynard, himself a veteran of 30 years in politics, has an undisguised admiration for the fiery Texan, with whom he conferred yesterday at New York for the first time.

"I was the one," said Maynard, "who brought to his attention the whispering campaign that is being conducted against him—the rumors of intolerance and all that.

GARNER HAS COURAGE

"He not only voted for Al Smith, he made speeches for him. He did it when it required a lot more courage than from ourselves who worked in a territory favorable to Al Smith.

"It's mighty easy for us here in Massachusetts to be against prohibition now, after 14 years of experience with it. But this man voted and spoke against it at the time of its adoption when many of our New England Congressmen were carried off their feet by the 'wave of sentiment' for it then. It took courage and statesmanship to be against prohibition then, and John N Garner had both."

Maynard was asked if Garner will speak in New England.

"You bet he will," said Maynard. "And the people, once they see this rugged, fighting, plain-spoken man will have the same affection for him that he won from me in my meeting with him at New York yesterday."

3 INDICTED FOR B. E. F. BATTLE

Washington, Aug. 16 (AP)—Three men were indicted by a grand jury today for their part in the fighting between veterans and police which led to the ejection of the bonus army from the capital at the point of army bayonets.

Police said one of the men indicted, Broadus Faukner, 32, a Kentucky Negro, had served a prison term in Michigan for breaking and entering and that he was sentenced to 90 days this year in Philadelphia as a professional thief.

Faulkner was charged with felonious assault upon Patrolman John E. Scott. Scott was badly injured in the fighting which preceded the calling out of troops by President Hoover.

Mrs. Spellman Is Reported Better

Mrs. Ellen Conway Spellman, mother of Msgr. Spellman, recently appointed auxiliary bishop of Boston, was reported improved today after Sunday's heart attack in her home, Washington st., Whitman.

Dr. Martin Spellman and Dr. John H. Spellman of Back Bay, two other sons, are attending their mother.

BASEBALL IS NO HIGHBALL SIGN

A baseball found by dry agents behind a bar in a back room in Washington st., South End, was merely a souvenir and not a sign to indicate "highballs" could be bought there at a reasonable price, it was testified before Federal Commissioner Jenney today.

Albert C. Walker, charged with possessing liquor, found behind the bar where the baseball was kept, pleaded not guilty and was held in $500.

He said the baseball had no significance other than as a souvenir.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Hugo Bagnulo tried to bring out that the baseball was a signal to prospective customers for the delivery of highballs on a "speakeasy plan of sale."

MONKS BEATEN, ROPED TO BED BY GUARD

Startling Story Is Revealed at Trial of Boston Heir to Determine Sanity

San Diego, Aug. 16 (INS)—A story stranger than fiction was unfolded here today to a jury of eight women and four men at a trial to determine the sanity of Allan Bradford Monks, 57-year-old heir to a large Boston fortune.

Testimony revealed that Monks, once an engineer, explorer, and international chess player, had in recent years been kept a virtual prisoner. One witness declared she had seen Monks beaten and roped to a bed by a Japanese guard.

SILENT WITNESS

The state's star witness however was a silent one—Monks himself.

Unable, apparently to understand, Monks had to be carried to the stand by two stalwart deputy sheriffs.

"Are you Allan B. Monks?" Deputy District Attorney Holt asked.

There was no response. Monks sat, in the witness chair, eyes closed and his head thrown back.

"Do you know what it is to take a solemn oath to tell the truth?" Holt queried.

There was still no answer.

"Do you know who you are?"

PHYSICAL WRECK

Without response Monks was carried back to his chair where he was seated by the side of his wife, Antoinette Monks, who faces bad check charges in connection with her husband's estate.

To friends in the courtroom who were aware of Monks' past accomplishments, his appearance was startling. He used to weigh 195 pounds, but now is down to less than 130 and seems to be in very poor physical and mental health.

Ely Home, Sees Canada Beer, Wine Law Big Success

Gov. Ely returned today from a two weeks' vacation in Canada with a fine coat of tn nd new dmiration for the Quebec liquor system.

But to apply the uebec system in Massachusetts the governor beleives beer would have to be sold cheaper—perhaps at a nickel a nickel a glass.

Although he mde no study of the system while on his motor trip through Canada, the governor reached the conclusion, he said, that it was working very well from a tempernace beer and wine standpoint.

"Of course it is an attempt to get people off hard liquor," he said. "I think they are succeeding very well. To make that system work here I think they'd have to sell beer at a lower price."

"Nickel beer, governor?" someone suggested.

"Something around that," the governor answered.

Asked whether he had decided yet whether he would call a special session of the Legislature to take up the financial needs of municipalities whose resources are being exhausted by welfare aid, he said:

"I've been giving very serious consideration to that and will for the rest of the week."

He held a half-hour conference with Edwin Smith, commissioner of labor and industry. Sweat shop conditions among the needle workers at Fall River were discussed.

The governor said there would be a meeting of his council tomorrow. Confirmation of his appointment of Lewis Goldberg to the Superior court bench is expected then.

Removal Asked

J. Weston Allen, former attorney-general, whose removal as a trustee of the P. Briggs Wadsworth estate is asked in a suit filed by Edna C. Wadsworth of Boston.

COURT TO RULE ON RAID RIGHT

The right of dry agents to raid premises without a warrant and only on suspicion will be ruled upon in Federal court, September 7, as a result of the point being raised today in a preliminary hearing.

Dry agents testified at the hearing on a charge of possessing liquor against Antonio Simones of Franklin st., Somerville, that they went to his home on a tip, smelled liquor fumes, heard a still operating, saw barrels of mash, forced open a door and arrested Simones. A 200-gallon still and 30 barrels of mash were seized.

Simones pleaded not guilty and was held in $500 pending the decision in September.

WHERE MAYOR WALKER'S WIFE WAS STRICKEN AT MASS

In observance of the Feast of the Assumption, Mayor James J. Walker and Mrs. Walker of New York City attended mass in St. Mary's Church, Albany, yesterday, before resumption of the mayor's hearing on Samuel Seabury's charges, before Gov. Roosevelt in the State Capitol. Mrs. Walker is shown in a polka dot dress to the right of her husband. She suffered a fainting spell when the church service was nearing conclusion and was taken to her hotel where she had another bad turn later in the day. Mrs. Walker recently underwent a serious operation in New York and her recovery, it is feared, has been handicapped by her determination to be with the mayor during his trial before the Governor in Albany. Dispatches today said she showed improvement, but Dr. William Schroeder, Jr., indicated he might order her back to New York for a much-needed rest. It had been announced she would be called as a witness for her husband. (International News Pohtos.)

EXCURSION SHIP AND HOUSE HIT BY U. S. BOMBS

Naval Reserve Aviators' Missiles Set Fire to N. Y. Family's Home

New York, Aug. 16 (INS)—Two bombs dropped by naval reserve aviators in practice over Canarsie bay today landed wide of the target, one tearing through the porch of a home nearly a mile away and the other endangering an excursion boat loaded with people.

One bomb aimed at a target on Center Island, more than half a mile off shore, tore through the porch of Philip Schwab's home in Canarsie, while Schwab, his wife and two children were inside the house.

The bomb tore a 14-inch hole through the roof, burst into fragments which were scattered for 200 yards and set fire to the house when its smoke fuse exploded.

Canarsie police found a two-inch fragment of the bomb's nose cap embedded in the wall of the sitting room of the home. Nearby houses were splattered with bomb fragments, but nobody was injured. Firemen extinguished the fire at the home before it caused much damage.

Mystery Horse Is Still Unclaimed

Four would-be owners have seen the mare but none of them identified her. Miss Eleanor Mei, owner of the farm, now believes that the horse is a stray and did not come from the fire at all.

CHUM HELD FOR TORCH DEATH

A complaint charging Alexander Santosuosso, 17, of Folsom st., Revere, with manslaughter in the burning to death of James Beatrice, 12, of 18 Folsom st., was issued today in Chelsea court.

Beatrice died August 4 in Massachusetts General hospital from burns suffered July 19 in Revere, when he was soaked with gasoline at a filling station and his clothing was ignited by one of his playmates.

The Beatrice boy and several chums were playing at the filling station when one of the group unhooked the hose at a gas pump. Gasoline doused Beatrice, who had a paper under his arm.

Someone placed a lighted match against the paper as a joke, but the prank was quickly converted into tragedy when the boy became enveloped in flames.

HARNEY IN RACE AGAINST ELY

Gov. Ely, until today unopposed for the Democratic nomination for Governor, found himself facing a contest before filing time closed at the State House.

Frank J. Harney of New Park st., Lynn, filed papers bearing 1400 signatures and issued a statement in which he charged Ely with "lack of leadership."

Harney said his campaign would be "an exposure of the Ely tactics, using public records as the basis of the charges."

A hot contest between the forces of Charles Innes and his opponents in the Back Bay was forecast in another last minute filing. It is that of Rep. Richard Johnston, who filed for nomination as Republican senator to oppose Senator Henry Parkman, Jr.

Charles J. Innes, son of the Republican leader filed for representative.

The office of State Secretary Frederic W. Cook was flooded with aspirants. They included Gaspar G. Bacon, president of the Senate, who filed for the Republican nomination for lieutenant-governor.

"Sonny" Whitney to Run for Congress

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—Cornelius Vanderbilt (Sonny) Whitney, son of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and grandson of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, has been designated Democratic candidate for Congress from the First Congressional district, Philip N. Krug, Democratic chairman of Nassau County, announced today.

Frances Starr

The bride's sister, Mrs. George A. Van Tuyl, was matron of honor and Robert Golden Donaldson, Jr., was best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Victor M. Rhein, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle.

Mrs. Gillette Left Whole Fortune of Razor King

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (US)—Disposing of an estate estimated in excess of $1,000,000, the will of King C. Gillette, safety razor magnate, who died July 9, was admitted to probate.

Mrs. Gillette

Mrs. Alanta E. Gillette, the widow, was named sole beneficiary of the estate.

Gillette stated in his will:

"I am intentionally making no provision for my son, King C. Gillette, in this will, having full faith and confidence in my said wife to make such provision for our said son as she may deem best."

A clause provides that in case of Mrs. Gillette's death all the property goes to the son.

Byrd Radio Operator Ready for Norway Hop

New York, Aug. 16—Thor Solberg, pilot, and Carl Petersen, radio operator, will take off on their flight to Oslo, Norway, Friday, if weather conditions permit.

Carl Petersen

Petersen was a member of Rear-Admiral Byrd's expedition to the Antarctic. The pair will leave from Floyd Bennett Field.

The manufacturers' sales tax is coming. You may write it in your tablets, or bet on it, if you prefer. The retail sales tax, which would cause endless confusion, and be unworkable, is NOT coming, nor any general application of the state retail sales tax, reported to have worked well in Mississippi.

Berlin sends the most important news of today, and of this century. If it means commercial release of energy that holds together the electrons and nucleus of the atom, with the added possibility of manufacturing the elements at will, gold, platinum, etc., it will be the greatest news of all time.

Two German scientists, Lange and Brasch, using an artificial "thunderbolt" of 2,500,000 volts, have split an atom of lead, releasing energy equivalent to fifteen million volts.

If you turned all the lead and iron in the world into gold, that would mean nothing. To release atomic energy would mean everything, for it would provide power unlimited, like water and air.

The energy locked up in the atoms of oxygen and hydrogen in two teaspoonfuls of water would drive the steamship Leviathan twice across the ocean.

But do not sell your coal mines or good oil stocks. Things move slowly. A little steam engine was shown in Alexandria in the Serapien, long before the birth of Christ. But man waited long for the steamboat and locomotive.

How that atomic energy WOULD end our depression. Man could do literally ANYTHING, level mountains, fill in oceans, drain, irrigate, develop everything, abolish deserts, that are the earth's cancers. It could not, however, abolish human greed, the desire to have too much. Only time and education can do that.

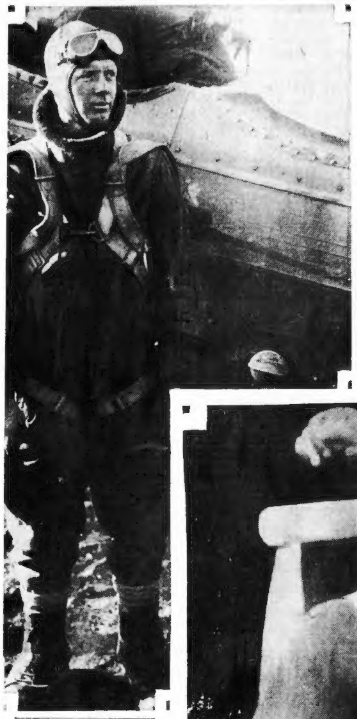
ANOTHER SON COMES TO EASE LINDBERGH TRAGEDY PAIN



ON FAME'S PINNACLE
Lindbergh beside "The Spirit of St. Louis" in Washington

THE BABY THAT'S GONE
Little Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., whose tragic kidnaping and fiendish death shocked the entire world last spring. Today another baby boy came to the Lindberghs, bringing sorrowful memories of the boy lost to them forever, but serving partially to ease the pain of the outrageous blow dealt to them through a poor little innocent.

LINDBERGHS' FAVORITE PICTURE OF THEIR SLAIN SON

GLORIFIED AGAIN
Through a period of seemingly endless days, Anne Lindbergh's arms held only a torture of emptiness while the world looked on in sympathy and in wonder and a little in fear. Today those arms cradle another baby—another son.

WAR DECLARED ON MARXISTS BY HITLER

Berlin, Aug. 16 (INS)—Germany's National Socialists will "support and tolerate" any Nationalist cabinet that strengthens the front against Socialism and Communism, Adolf Hitler, Nazi leader, declared today.

In an interview with the Rheinisch Westfaelische Zeitung at Essen, Hitler served notice that he would not take office in the ministry now headed by Chancellor Franz Von Papen.

"The Von Papen cabinet will inevitably lead to chaos," Hitler said, "because it is based on dying traditions instead of a popular mass movement.

"The Nazis will support and tolerate any Nationalist cabinet so long as it strengthens the Nationalist fight against the Marxist front."

The Von Papen government is doomed, Hitler said, because it constitutes a dictatorship without popular support.

"A dictatorship is possible only when it is based on the popular will," he said.

Shiloh House Saved From Foreclosure

Waukegan, Ill., Aug. 16 (AP)—Shiloh House, family home of the late Dr. John Alexander Dowie, founder of the Christian Catholic Apostolic Church in Zion City, is to be saved.

The Rev. A. J. Gladstone Dowie, son of the founder, who, with his mother, 77, has occupied this house for several years, announced today an overdue payment of $375 on a $10,000 mortgage would be paid.

PICCARD WEARY OF LONG WAIT

Dubendorf Airfield, Zurich, Switzerland, Aug 16 (INS)—After more than a week of waiting for favorable weather to take off on their balloon ascention in the stratosphere, Prof. Auguste Piccard and his assistant, Max Cosyns, today showed signs of cracking under the nervous strain.

Realizing the urgent necessity of 36 hours of uninterrupted favorable weather, Piccard has postponed the take-off from day to day.

The nervous tension has told particularly on Cosyns who is reported to have suffered a complete loss of appetite.

Heavy clouds preclude the possibility of a take-off tomorrow, but indications are Thursday may be favorable.

Alcohol Tends to Improve Human Race, Say Scientists

New York, Aug. 16 (INS)—Two English women scientists who have spent the past nine years studying the influence of alcohol on heredity have concluded that parents who are heavy drinkers unconsciously are improving their family stock, as children of alcoholic parents tend to become stronger physically and mentally from generation to generation.

Their first report, just completed, is reviewed in the current issue of the Lancet, chief British medical journal. They assert that instead of causing "racial deterioration," alcohol definitely seems to improve a family stock, this becoming especially noticable after four generations of alcoholism.

The women scientists, Miss F. M. Durham and Miss H. M. Woods, conducted the experiments under the auspices of the British Medical Research Council.

The women experimenters found no evidence to support popular belief that the fertility of individuals is effected by alcohol. They also assert that "there is no evidence that exposure to alcohol causes the production of abnormal young."

WOMAN DYING, MAN SHOT DEAD

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—An unclothed woman dashing into Times sq. screaming "He shot me," brought police early today to the scene of a double shooting.

They found the body of a man in a room in the Hotel Tivoli. Two bullets had entered his head and his hand clutched a revolver. Papers led police to believe he was Mathew Kulus of Coney Island.

The woman, who said she was Muriel Olwell, 35, single, had been shot in the jaw, and was taken to a hospital in a serious condition. Police said the man had engaged the room as her husband.

CURLEY SHAKEUP TO STOP DOLE FRAUDS

MOTHER FAINTS AS DOLE PLEA IS DENIED

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth McPhee of Mystic st., Everett, who collapsed at City Hall, Everett, today when her appeal for increased relief was denied. Her daughter, Mrs. Irene McCarthy, herself the mother of two children and whose husband is out of work, is shown administering to her. Mrs. McPhee told officials she'd had only a cup of tea for breakfast and that her cupboard was absolutely bare. She was advised to seek aid from neighbors

Hecht of the welfare board yesterday, when Hecht asked for a cessation of publicity on police disclosures for the present.

The police commissioner refused but consented to meet Chairman Hecht today. The latter was accompanied by Edward H. Willey, Mrs. Agnes H. Parker and William H. Taylor.

The welfare members explained the machinery of their department to the police head, who now has the entire investigation in his hands.

DOLE FOLK IN MARCH

Everett and Malden unemployed were reported today preparing for marches on city hall to protest against the cuts in their allotments.

Other developments in the welfare situation in Greater Boston were:

EVERETT—Crowds of unemployed gather in city hall with 1000 name-petition for removal of the welfare director. Radicals blamed. Mayor N'Neill says city is doing all it can...

MALDEN: Deputation presents Mayor Hastings with demand for restoration of the full amounts of their allowances, recently subected to drastic cuts.

SOMERVILLE: Officials reveal the welfare fund has been wiped out, and efforts to replenish it is blocked by legal technicalities.

WEYMOUTH: Entire new schedule of allowances announced, with food allowances from $3.50 to $5.50 a week for families.

WATERTOWN: Three alleged welfare thieves in court tomorrow; drive against racketeers having excellent results, officials report.

The Everett unemployed who gathered on the steps and in the corridors of City Hall today failed to see Mayor O'Neill before he went to lunch, but said they would present their petition to him later.

CITY WORKERS UNPAID

If necessary, a determined front will be shown by a parade to City Hall of at least 1000 persons, they said. Malden dole recipients were making similar plans in event of failure to convince the mayor. .....

"It is perfectly ridiculous," said Mayor O'Neill. "Mr. Dudley, whose removal they ask, is doing all that is humanly possible.

"Our welfare is costing us more than $700,000 this year, and this is the eighth week that we have not paid city employes.

"We are carrying the welfare department along on the weekly current revenue of the city. We're caring for 1200 persons. The welfare disbursements take about $9.00 of the tax rate.

"If they can't get along on what we are giving them, I guess they couldn't get along on anything."

BLAMES "RADICALS"

Director Dudley blamed "radicals" for organizing the marches and said:

"If they march again today it will amuse me to death. We spent $390,000 for relief the first seven months of this year. For the last five months our allowance is only $150,000. Drastic cuts were necessitated."

At Everett city hall one man said his allotment for a family of four had been reduced from $10 to $4 a week.

The special division of public aid investigation of Boston police headquarters, under command of Deputy Supt. Thomas F. Goode, was busy re-checking the first batch of fraudulent and suspicious cases reported by the police of the various divisions.

WHAT WEYMOUTH PAYS

Weymouths' new schedule of public aid allowances, drawn up by a committee of 40 headed by Allen C. Emery, is as follows:

First class, single persons able to work—maximum of $3 a week per person.

Second class, single persons unable to work, but able to take care of themselves—maximum of $4 a week.

Third Class, single persons unable to care for themselves, mostly aged persons—left to discretion of the welfare board.

Fourth class, man and wife, maximum food allowance, $3.50. Man, wife and one child, $4.50. Man, wife and two children, $5.50. Seventy-five cents for each additional child.

Fifth class, widows with children under 16 and mothers with children under 16, whose husbands have deserted—mother and one child ,maximum $4; two children, $5. Extra 75 cents for each additional child.

$20 RENT LIMIT

Medical and hospital care is at the discretion of the welfare board. In winter, half a ton of coal or half a cord of wood, or both, will be provided each month, at the discretion of the board.

A maximum of $20 a month is allowed for rent where the town is to pay rent. The committee recommended that the police department be given the work of investigating welfare applications.

Watertown officials, making further disclosures relating to the cases of three men who must appear in court tomorrow on larceny charges, in connection with receiving public aid, said that Frank Capone, Hudson st., had received $200 in five months while also receiving insurance payments.

HIDES HIS RICHES

Thomas Corsi, Edenfield ave., officials said, had received $577 in four months while he had $850 in the bank. He has drawn out this money and has refused to tell what he has done with it.

Charles Kasabian, Hazel st., is alleged to have been working regularly since 1930 in a Dorchester ice cream plant at $20 to $25 a week and to have received $350 in town aid during the past few months.

A recipient of aid walked into the Watertown department offices today while Selectman Maurice H. O'Connell and Director Daniel H Murphy were there. He had been cut from $10 to $6 because it was discovered his daughter had obtained work.

There was a newspaper clipping about welfare investigations on the wall, and after this man drew his order for $6 he handed it to Murphy, saying:

HUNGRY TWO DAYS

A 23-year-old Watertown youth protested to the town officials that his father was getting only $6 a week and had to pay $4 for room rent, leaving only $2 for food, forcing him to go without food two days each week. Town officials said he was receiving the same amount as others and would have to make his own arrangements as to how he spent it.

Commissioner Hultman will make no official statement about fraud discoveries until he has at least 500 cases reported to him by the special investigating division.

It was revealed today that he carefully refrained from taking a hand in the alleged welfare frauds until specifically requested in writing to do so—because he realized the ramifications that the investigation would have to follow, including inquiry into the use of influence to get persons on the welfare list.

It is this phase of the investigation which is being anxiously awaited by certain politicians, according to reports.

Mayor Curley, asked if he had anything to say about the difference of opinion between Commr Hultman and the welfare board replied:

"The matter was turned over by the welfare department to the police department. Commr. Hultman is now working on it. It is a matetr for those two departments.

"Indications are that it would be advisable for those not entitled to aid to cease accepting it or take the consequences."

NEW FRAUDS REVEALED

Police continued to uncover frauds. In the South End yesterday a divorced wife and her former husband, who have not seen each other for 20 years, were revealed as recipients of welfare aid from the same address in Waltham st., South End.

The husband's case was checked last week and found worthy. Yesterday the woman's name entered and police immediately checked. The man told them he had not seen his wife for 20 years and could not understand how the woman had obtained his address. She is being sought today.

In the North End police discovered three young men, aid recipients and brothers, preparing a welcome party for a fourth brother, who was returning from State Prison. Preparations for a lavish banquet for about 15 guests were under way.

In Roxbury police discovered a single man getting $10 weekly from the city while he is working. His mother and brother are spending the summer at Beachmont in a leased cottage.

J. HOWARD McGRATH JAMES FARLEY DAVID WILSON

WOMAN SWOONS IN DOLE PLEA

The pitiful plight of one poor Everett family was revealed today when a mother and daughter appeared at city hall appealing for an order for groceries. They had to be refused.

The mother nearly collapsed from weakness during a two hours' wait to see officials. She is Mrs. Mary McPhee, 57, a widow, of 9 Mystic st., whose allotment was recently cut from $10 to $5 a week.

"I received the $5 last Thursday and paid it for my room," she said. "I've only had a cup of tea for breakfast and haven't got a thing to eat in the house."

She was seated on the steps of city hall, recovering her strength when her married daughter, Mrs. Irene McCarthy of Everett st. came out of the building. The latter was alarmed at her mother's condition. She had been in the appeal for an increase of the $6 allowed her unemployed husband for a family of four.

LYNN DEFENDS DOLLAR DOLE FOR NEEDY

Answering critics who declared there is not sufficient nourishment in the welfare menus drawn up by the Lynn dietetic committee, Dr. George W. Haywood presented today to Mayor J. Fred Manning a complete count of the calories, proteins, fats and carbohydrates in the list of foodstuffs.

The total number of calories per person per week, according to Dr. Haywood is 2491, and if the five persons on which the menus are based consume the 24½ pound bag of flour which is additional, through donation by the Farm Relief Board, each person of the five will absorb 5800 calories additional.

This one bag of flour per week, which may be had by any family on aplication to the welfare board, contains 29,000 calories, Dr. Haywood said. He presented the following breakfast, dinner and supper menus for a typical day, based on the list of foodstuffs submitted last week for a family of five and at a cost of $1.20 per person per week:

BREAKFAST

Half an orange, rolled oats with evaporated milk, toast and butter, coffee or cocoa.

DINNER

SUPPER

Macaroni and cheese, bread and butter, tea or milk.

MARBLE PALACE SOLD TO PRINCE

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16—The famous "Marble Palace," honeymoon present to Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, widow of the late New York society man, and divorced wife of William K. Vanderbilt, today was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Fredercik H. Prince of Pride's Crossing, Mass.

The palace was started by Belmont in 1897, a year after the daughter of a Southern cotton planter divorced Vanderbilt and married him. It was completed in 1902 at an estimated cost of $5,000,000.

No price was announced in today's sale, but the property is generally estimated at a value of $10,000,000.

The estate is reputed to have been the scene of more lavish receptions to European royalty than any other American home. Among the guests entertained there were the King of Spain, a Russian duke and the Prince of Wales.

BURKE TO HEAR TAX MARCHERS

Several hundred Medford people are planning to march to City Hall tonight to protest to Mayor Burke about the high taxes.

The mayor, who has expressed his willingness to discuss this matter with the people, has arranged a special meeting with them.

The group is under the leadership of Mrs. Evelyn Bracy of 22 Pilgrim rd., Medford, and will gather at her home about 8 o'clock tonight and march to the City Hall.

QUIZ WALKER ON WOMAN

Mayor Walker denied today that he knew of special accounts maintained by Sherwood, who, Samuel Seabury contends, handled almost $1,000,000 for the mayor.

The Governor traced the movement of two checks for $25,000, payable to Mayor Walker, and drawn on his brokerage account with Paul Block, the publisher. The checks were dated June 9 and June 16, 1927.

NOT FOR SHERWOOD.

The mayor said he received the money on the checks, endorsed them and returned them to Baruch & Co., the brokerage firm which handled the Block-Walker account.

"I never gave those two payments of $25,000 cash to Sherwood for deposit anywhere," Walker explained with emphasis.

The mayor has contended that Sherwood, an employe of the law firm in which Mr. Walker formerly was a member, handled only routine financial matters for him.

Walker said Sherwood gave checks to his sisters, Mrs. Nan Walker Burke of Far Rockaway, but that he gave the accountant the money to cover them. The Governor reminded Walker checks Mrs. Burke received were drawn on Sherwood's account at the Central Hanover Trust Company.

Curtain disputed Seabury's interjection that the records do not show the mayor reimbursed Sherwood in cash.

"Have you any record of the amounts in cash you gave Sherwood?" Roosevelt asked Walker.

WANTS SECRET RECORD

"Referring to the Block account, it appears that on Feb. 1 to March 1, 1929; there was drawn a check for $7500," said Roosevelt, referring to a payment to the "unknown person" of the Sherwood accounts.

The governor then called Walker, Curtin and Seabury to his desk for a low-voiced conference.

Curtin today demanded that Seabury be forced to produce the private records of the Hofstadter committee.

"I insist that these records be subpoenaed," declared the mayor's counsel. "We have a right to see them, to determine just how Seabury arrives at some of his statements. I want the private testimony taken at all those secret hearings."

BOMB AT FORD PLANT A DUD

Officials of the Boston & Maine Railroad and Somerville police received a scare today when a 275 millimeter shell was found beside the tracks in East Somerville, in back of the Ford plant.

The scare ended, however, when Capt. Charles J. Van Amburgh, state ballistics expert, examined the shell, of the typ eused in the World War, and said it was empty of explosive material.

Lieut. Everett A. Nash and Special Officer Devine of the railroad police found the shell, 14 inches long, with white, silver-like nose in place. They notified Somerville police and the shell was gingerly carried to police headquarters by Patrolmen John H. Baker and John McKenzie.

GRAND JURY ON RUM RING TRAIL

The federal grand jury which yesterday made no report of its investigation into the industrial alcohol ring and bootlegging conditions in Western Massachusetts is by no means finished with its inquiry.

It will reconvene shortly to go deeper into the existing conspiracies and at the same time receive evidence regarding the operation of a ring of bogus dry agents who are "macing" rum operators under the pretext of affording protection.

The activities of two such fake agents near Taunton and of others in various sections have been uncovered.

There are several missing links in the government's chain of evidence as it has been presented to the jury to date. These it is hoped will be supplied in the near future. As soon as new witnesses are ready, the jury will again be called into session and will make its final report on Sept. 13.

Should anything arise to hamper the government's efforts the entire situation will be presented to the next jury.

FATE OF FLIER LANCASTER IN JURY'S HANDS

Miami, Fla., Aug. 16 (AP)—A jury studied two versions of the death of Haden Clarke, young writer, as the murder trial of Capt. W. N. Lancaster, British flier who lost to him in love, drew toward a close today with final arguments by counsel.

One, presented by the defense, pictured Clarke as a suicide who killed himself because recurrent illness prevented his marriage to Mrs. Jesie M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix whose love he won from Lancaster.

The other, offered by the prosecution, sought to show Lancaster killed Clarke because the writer supplanted him in the woman's affections.

Defense Counsel James M. Carson described Lancaster as an unselfish, noble character, the victim of unhappy circumstance, who stood out far above the "muck, dirt and filth that make up the background of this trial."

Asistant State Attorneys Henry M. Jones and H. L. Enwall called Lancaster an "over-careful murderer," who killed because of jealous anger. Only the close of Carson's argument, the final argument of State Atty. N. Vernon Hawthorne and the churge of Judge H. F. Atkinson remained before the case was to be handed to the jury today.

The flier was charged with first degree murder. Conviction carries the death penalty unless a recommendation for mercy is made. Then the sentence would be life.

MINE WAR ZONE BARS STUDENTS

Mt. Vernon, Ill., Aug. 16 (AP)—Southern Illinois coal fields, preoccupied with the factional strife of union miners, witnessed today the homeward trek of a caravan of investigating mid-western university students who had been ordered to depart immediately under threat of arrest.

The students had intended spending five days in the coal fields. They were met here last night—their first in the coal belt—and given the option of immediate departure or arrest. They chose to leave.

Sheriff Browning Robinson of neighboring Franklin County, where the students had intended making their headquarters, told them:

Meanwhile national guard troops were moved to the Dixie Bee Mine, near Terre Haute in Indiana, where union miners have threatened trouble over the operation of a mine with non-union diggers.

In virtually every locality through which the students will pass groups of union miners, dissatisfied with the new $5 daily basic wage scale, can be seen picketing mines to prevent other union miners from returning to work.

DUKES JAILED, AUTOS WAIT

Madrid, Aug. 16 (AP)—Hundreds of de luxe automobiles were lined up alongside Modelo Jail this morning, where a score of Spain's proudest dukes and marquises are imprisoned as a result of last week's rebellion.

The Duke of Medinoeli and the Duke Del Infantado, two of the country's oldest aristocrats, were among those inside, rubbing elbows with laborers, employes and clerks.

It was estimated 1100 prisoners are in the jail as a result of the rebellion.

Nobles' Property to Be Seized in Spain

Seville, Spain, Aug. 16 (AP)—Far-reaching orders for the confiscation of the property of monarchists and nobles were issued by the local government today due to last week's abortive monarchist rebellion.

The government took possession of a chalet belonging to the Marquis of Esquevel and announced it would proceed to take over all the possessions of other noblemen and "bourgeoise" found to have aided the rebellion financially.

The Duke of Grimaldi was arrested at San Sebastian and sent to Madrid under guard in connection with the investigation. Police closed all centers of the faction of the former prince royal, Don Jaime, at Valencia, after 10 Monarchists were arrested there.

Boys Questioned in School Vandalism

Three Roxbury boys, whose names were withheld by police on account of their youth, were questioned by police of Dudley st. station yesterday, after it was claimed they were responsible for vandalism in the Phillips Brooks school, Quincy st., Roxbury.

The boys emptied fire extinguishers over desks and tables, painted walls and blackboards, destroyed valuable papers and broke several desks.

G. B. Shaw Checks Up on Microbes

London, Aug. 16 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw has confessed a mistake. The New York production of "Too True to Be Good" had as a character a Measles Microbe.

In an interview with George Bishop, Shaw explains that has been changed for the English production, with the doctor explaining he just invented a microbe to please his patients.

55 LEADERS TO HELP JOBLESS

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—The nation's idle took a new grip on hope for relief today with the announcement that 55 of the country's leaders had agreed to serve on a committee to give aid to the unemployed.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Secretary of Commerce Roy D. Chapin, Owen D. Young and Thomas W. Lamont are included in the group drafted to form the membership of the national citizens' committee for the welfare and relief mobilization of 1932. Former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker is chairman.

One of the first aims of the committee of 55 will be to unite and reinforce local social service organizations, assisting them in readjusting their programs to fit the needs of their individual communities in addition to obtaining adequate funds to carry on their work.

The committee will sponsor a conference in Washington on September 15, when community social service leaders will be invited to participate. President Hoover will open the conference at the White House.

EXTRA GUARDS FOR LIBBY

Havre De Grace, Md., Aug. 16 (US)—As a sequel to the mysterious theft of the switch-key to the speed-boat Water Boy, in which Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds had planned to forget trouble while waiting trial for the murder of her husband, extra guards were posted today at Oakington.

Deputy sheriffs have been posted at strategic points about the estate at the request of Mrs. Louis Jenny, of Wilmington, Del., hostess to Mrs. Reynolds.

Because the strange theft is believed to have been engineered from the water, a yacht with a taciturn and husky crew has been posted across the bay at the mouth of the Bohemia river, reputedly under charter to Mrs. Jenny.

Assurance that the stage star would go on trial in six weeks came from Winston-Salem, N. C., in the form of a message that a special term of court had been called to clear the September calendar and prevent the press of business from interfering with the October session.

'Million Dollar' Men Discuss Insurance

San Francisco, Aug. 16 (AP)—A meeting of the "million dollar round table" of the insurance business was the principal event of the annual convention of National Life Underwriters here today, prior to the opening of the convention proper tonight.

The "millionaires," as the members of the round table are called, are agents who have sold $1,000,000 or more of life insurance during the last year.

Amateurs and Pro's In Aug. 27 Race

The Stone Harbor Yacht Club of Stone Harbor, N. J., has rescheduled its annual regatta for Aug. 27. Outboard races will be held for both amateur and professional drivers but only merchandise prizes will be awarded. In addition to the outboards, races will be scheduled for inboard runabouts and 125 cubic inch hydroplanes.

TRAMP GIRL IS THUMBING AGAIN

Concord, N. H., Aug. 16—"Dorothy Adams," mystery girl released in Boston yesterday after her troubles over the theft of a 10-cent roll of adhesive tape, had answered the lure of the road once more today and was bound here from Sanford, Me.

Still hiding beneath the cloak of mystery which she adopted since she was arrested in Boston a fortnight ago, the girl continued to avoid questioners and sought to cover her trail as she headed westward to what is believed to be her home.

She left Boston by bus from the North Station bound for Portland, Me., yesterday afternoon and left the bus as secretly as possible at Biddeford, Me. Here she made several attempts to cover her trail but was picked up on several occasions.

She entered the opera house and slipped out the back way. She was next seen in Elm st., where she procured a road map and was directed to Route 11, which leads here.

ARMY GRID STAR TAKES BRIDE

Ray Stecker, army officer and former West Point football star, and his bride, the former Jacquelyn Denston of Brookline, are honeymooning today before settling down at San Antonio, Tex., where Stecker is assigned as second lieutenant.

They were married yesterday in Hudson, N. Y. Mrs. Stecker is the daughter of Mrs. J. J. Denston of 1819 Beacon st., Brookline.

Renee Wins Health Battle; Panicky as She Heads Back

Prescott, Ariz., Aug. 16 (INS)—Renee Adoree, the pretty blue-eyed film star, had a "sort of panicky feeling" today as she prepared to return to Hollywood and her film career within the next two weeks.

Renee Adoree

"The nearer the time comes for me to leave for Hollywood the more afraid I am getting of having to meet people again," Miss Adoree said.

Her two-year battle against a lung ailment has been successful. For 18 months she law in bed, caressed by the healing Arizona sunshine. In recent weeks she had to learn to walk again.

Renee, who loved to have many friends around her, fought alone in her brave battlef or health. Visitors were forbidden.

"It will be good to see Hollywood again," she smiled, "see old friends, and catch up on all that has happened since I've been on the shelf. But it will be four months, at least, after I return before I can hope to go to work again. In those four months I will be regaining my strength.

"A lot of people, I know, think my breakdown was caused by running around to Hollywood parties like a 'glad girl.' They don't begin to realize how hard I worked on my pictures. It was the strenuous work that caused my health to break."

Renee has been a loyal trouper. At 10 she traveled to Europe with her father's show. After the World War she came to America and, two years later, appeared in her first screen success, "Made in Heaven," and she was a sensation in "The Big Parade."

For several months Renee and Lila Lee, another pretty film actress, were together in a sanitarium here. Miss Lee returned to Hollywood a few months ago and is again busy at work in pictures.

$5000 Blaze in Vacant Dwelling

Smelling smoke for nearly an hour while cruising in a police car early today Patrolmen John McCullum and Bernard Gray of the West Roxbury division traced it to the dwelling at 83 Temple st., West Roxbury.

The officers broke into the house but the family of Getrig Danielian, which occupies the house was in New York and no one was at home. The loss in the fire is estimated at $5000. An investigation will be conducted.

AIMS TO CRUSH FARM STRIKE

Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 16 (AP)—Armed forces were organized to maintain order in Iowa's farm strike as leaders of the movement sought its spread to other states.

Officials and civic leaders called for the deputizing of 100 unemployed men to guard the highways against outbreaks. Their decision followed rejection of a plan to ask for declaration of martial law to deal with the situation, which has been marked by picketing, boycotting and threats designed to withhold produce from the farms until production costs, plus a fair profit, are assured.

Sioux City bore the brunt of the movement. All roads were blocked by the "strikers" and all trucks were stopped. Drivers of some moving vans were forced to open their trucks and let farmers inspect them before they were allowed to proceed.

In Leeds, near here, one milk truck went through the farmers' lines, but pickets smashed the windshield with sticks and rocks. Two of the drivers suffered cuts.

Meanwhile reports came that similar strike movements were under way in South Dakota, North Dakota, Illinois and Nebraska. In Stevens, S. D., more than 200 farmers held up each vehicle for inspection. Other towns reported similar conditions.

Ship Salvaged

Kiel, Germany, Aug. 16—Towed under the water by tugs, the German training ship Niobe, which sank on July 26 with the loss of 69 lives, has arrived here.

Persian Shah Attacks Priest Who Insulted His Queen

London, Aug. 16 (INS)—A Mohammedan priest, said to have insulted her majesty, the Queen of Persia, because she entered a shrine in western dress and prayed with her veil drawn back, was personally beaten by His Majesty Shah Riza Khan Pahlevi, according to the Daily Herald today.

The Herald's correspondent in Teheran, Persia, reported the queen went into a shrine in Meshed, Northern Persia, drew her veil aside, and knelt in prayer.

The unfortunate priest, not knowing the identity of the worshipper, rushed up and reviled the queen for praying unveiled and also for wearing clothes of the western world.

A crowd assembled and, also unaware they were before their queen, took the side of the priest and became hostile.

The Shah was notified by telephone and arrived at Meshed the following day. He stalked into the shrine and threw the priest to the floor, striking him painfully. The priest later was fined.

BABY BOY BORN TO LINDBERGHS TO REPLACE SLAIN EAGLET

Betty Gow, Scotch girl, whose little charge, Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was stolen from his crib and slain, will be nurse to the new Lindbergh child, according to reports after the birth was announced in the Morrow home today. Betty is now on a vacation to her home in Scotland, but is expected back soon. (International News Photos.)

Second Child Comes 5 Months and 16 Days After Ghastly Kidnap Tragedy

ing for his murdered child. Several hours after he landed. Anne Lindbergh gave him another son. Lindbergh is in the air again, and there is a baby in the house.

It is believed that the birth was unexpected, for if it had been known to be so imminent, nothing could have persuaded Col. Lindbergh to leave his wife, even for the two hours that he was trying out the new low-wing monoplane.

He chatted easily with officials when he came down, showing no sign of anxiety or strain, and almost as soon as the public knew that Lindbergh had been seen about once more, the first real news there has been of him for months, the sudden and far greater news broke—he has a son again!

Anne's Iron Self-Control All the More Heroic

The amazing courage which Anne Lindbergh showed during the cruel months of suspense and horror after the disappearance of little Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and which even brought criticism from some people, believing her "too stoical to have feelings," has borne fruit at last.

Her calm, her enforced tranquility, her almost miraculous tearlessness in the face of a woman's bitterest grief, have ensured a safe entry into the world of a baby who might quite easily have died long before his time to be born.

Rumors ran riot at the time of the kidnaping that the birth of the second child was imminent. This was not true, of course, but it was widely believed until Mrs. Dwight Morrow and a spokesman of the Lindbergh family officially announced that the child would not be born until the end of August, or beginning of September.

Police Guard for Baby If Requested

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 16 (AP)—Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police, was out on field maneuvers with the National Guard today but his assistant, Maj. Charles Schoeffel, said a guard for the new Lindbergh baby would be furnished if requested.

The trial the young mother endured, then, was at a far more dangerous time than if it had been immediately preceding the births and her iron self-control was all the more heroic.

News Must Thrill Heart of Faithful Betty Gow

Details, however, were almost as elusive as they were during the search for the lost first child. Colonel Lindbergh, true to his dislike of publicity, for hours this morning would neither confirm or deny, reawakening fears in the hearts of millions that something had gone wrong.

Surely it would be too much to believe, if this second happiness of their lives were turning into tragedy. The country waited breathlessly as soon as the first murmurs of unconfirmed news had got about, but Lindbergh would not speak.

At the Morrow home, where the telephone was not left to ring unanswered as in the Flying Colonel's house, the answer was first of all; "We have no comment to make," and later, "There will be an announcement at 9:15." Surely this looked like good news? The queer silence bred strange rumors.

Everyone who heard the uncertain news thought of how many hearts it must rejoice. Even outside the family circle the Lindberghs, the Morrows, and their nearest friends—there is Betty Gow, home in Scotland to recover from the shock she suffered at the los of the her first beloved charge. How her heart must leap at the thought that there is another little boy for her to care for, how her heart must beat at the thought of her new responsibility, almost too precious to be borne!

Only those who know how, and why, the murdered baby died can hear the news without rejoicing. Guilt and fear, even in the lowest, are too strong for that.

Slain Child Would Be Little Over 2 Years Now

The Lindbergs' first baby was 20 months old when he was kidnaped, and would have been a little more than two years old now if he had lived.

His body was found near the Lindbergh home, however, after a world-wide search and officials believed he had been killed by the kidnapers, perhaps accidentally, almost immediately after he was stolen from his nursery.

The fact that Mrs. Lindbergh was expecting a second child became generally known only after the first son was kidnaped. She was under constant medical care during the long search for the baby and his kidnapers and had been in retirement since her return to the home of her mother here several weeks ago.

Mrs. Morrow, after the first baby had been found dead, and Mrs. Lindbergh had given proof of such fortitude, decided it as perfectly safe to leave her, went for a brief visit abroad with others of her children and only recently returned to be with Mrs. Lindbergh at this time.

Mrs. Lindbergh astounded the world, from the very moment her first baby was kidnaped, by the strength with which she met the tragic situation into which fate threw her son soon after the death of her father, Senator Dwight W. Morrow, who died last year while she and Col. Lindbergh were making a flying tour of the Far East.

So far as could be learned Mrs. Lindbergh continued about her household duties even from the first, making herself of service to all the searchers for her baby who made the Lindbergh home their headquarters.

Col. Lindbergh, from the moment of that blustery March night when he discovered his son was missing, has sought assuagement of his grief in constant activity of one sort or another.

Up to the time the baby's body was found he was always in the van of the searchers, himself directing various phases of the hunt for the kidnapers and attempting negotiations with them through the agency, among others, of Dr. John F. Condon, aged Bronx educator, and John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., boatbuilder.

Through Dr. Condon, who had negotiated for return of the baby through newspaper advertisements signed "Jafsie," he paid a futile $50,000 ransom which Dr. Condon passed over a cemetery hedge in the Bronx.

Futile Hunt by Plane for His Kidnaped Child

Payment of this money was followed, by direction of the people who received it, by a series of airplane flights by the distracted father in search of a boat on which the baby was said to be held.

This boat was never found and Col. Lindbergh finally came to the decision that he had been duped and made public the numbers of all the ransom bills in the hope of thus tracing the people who had so cruelly deceived him.

He has always expressed complete confidence in Dr. Condon.

After the baby's body was found, at which time Col. Lindbergh was on a boat following a clue given him by Curtis, the Norfolk shipbuilder was arrested and charged with obstructing justice.

Preparations for Second Baby While Hunt Was On

At a trial at which Col. Lindenbergh was one of the principal witnesses Curtis was convicted. He was sentenced to serve one year in prison and pay a fine of $1000 and is now at liberty under bail pending appeal.

During all the frenzied months of search for the missing baby and attempts to capture the kidnap-murderers after it was found that the baby was dead, preparations went steadily forward for the arrival of the second child, who was born today.

While the Lindberghs remained in Hopewell during the long search for their first son, Mrs. Lindbergh made weekly visits to the Morrow home here for consultation with physicians. Since the Curtis trial she has remained in her mother's home under constant medical supervision.

Mrs. Lindbergh was attended, while awaiting birth of her second child, by Dr. Edward Hawkes, the specialist who attended her at the birth of her first child. Dr. Hawkes was in frequent consultation on the case also with Dr. Edward H. Dennen and three other specialists.

Only Yesterday Made Test Flight of New Plane

After the Curtis trial, Col. Lindbergh sought to occupy his mind by turning once more to business affairs and has spent much time daily in his office in lower Broadway and in the offices of Pan-American Airways in the Grand Central district, an international airline company of which he is technical director. Only yesterday he made a short test flight at Newark airport of a new type of plane.

Although Mrs. Morrow returned from abroad recently to be here at the time of the birth of her grandchild, the new baby's two aunts and uncle, Elizabeth, Constance and Dwight Morrow, were still abroad.

When the first Lindbergh baby was kidnaped Mrs. Lindbergh's first thought was for its health. The baby had been suffering from a cold and only for that reason had the Lindberghs stayed over the week-end and been in Hopewell on the night the kidnapers came.

In the hope of safeguarding the child's health, Mrs. Lindbergh broadcast a detailed description of the baby's diet and begged the kidnapers to continue this diet pending their return of the child to its parents.

Does Research Work for Rockefeller Institute

Besides his work for aviation, Col. Lindbergh has also more recently turned to scientific investigation and has been a frequent worker in the laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute. He has published one article on the results of his research and is known to have been continuing his work, although little has been made known of its nature.

When the Lindberghs first built their home in Hopewell in the isolated Sourland Hills region, it was generally supposed they would have their estate guarded against any possible interlopers. Col. Lindbergh, however, wished to be on completely neighborly terms with the nearby farmers and tradespeople, and for this reason had no guards in his employ.

There was much speculation today as to what means he would take to guard against kidnaping of the new baby. No immediate steps in this direction would be necessary, however, as the Morrow home has always been fully guarded since the first Lindbergh baby was born there.

The baby lost through kidnapers was a chubby boy with blue eyes, fair complexion, golden, curly hair. He resembled the famous aviator closely. The end of his life came when he was just beginning to toddle.

Wedded Anne After Romance of the Air

Col. Lindbergh flew into fame in 1927 when he piloted the "spirit of St. Louis" across the Atlantic to Paris to win a $25,000 prize. Before that he had completed army flying instruction and been an air mail pilot flying between St. Louis and Chicago. He was the son of a middle-western congressman. His mother lives in Detroit.

The Paris flight and subsequent trail-blazing in the air made him an international hero.

His marriage to Anne Morrow helped to weld friendly relations between the United States and Mexico. The romance bloomed in Mexico City where Mrs. Lindbergh's father, the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, was American Ambassador.

The first Lindbergh baby was born on Mrs. Lindbergh's 24th birthday. She is now just 26 years old. Colonel Lindbergh is 30.

Lindy and Anne Unchanged in Youthful Appearance

Englewood, N. J., Aug. 16 (AP)—Despite the tragedies which have marked their lives Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh have remained practically unchanged in appearance since they first came into world prominence.

Col. Lindberg is still the curly headed young man who made the world gasp with the exploit of his flight to France. He still likes to go bareheaded and his tall thin figure has not filled out with the years. He is still boyish in general appearance just as his wife has retained all the youthful appearance of her girlhood.

To those who know her well Mrs. Lindbergh still seems the gentle, shy, gracious girl who before her marriage moved gracefully about the campus of Smith College, taking honors in scholarship and in her idle moments writing poems which often appeared in the college magazine.

Safes Looted in Charlestown Break

Two thieves broke into the real estate office of ex-State Senator James Mellen in Chelsea st., Charlestown, early today and took a $50 Liberty Loan bond and $6 in cash from two small safes. Patrolman Thomas Holmes discovered the rear screen door of the office ripped open and found the safes rifled.

Alice McCarthy and Gertrude Sullivan, both of Prospect st., Charlestown, told Holmes they had seen two suspicious men standing in the front of the office a short while before.

NEW M'KNIGHT LOANS FROM BANK DIRECTOR BARED

Walter F. Cushing, director of the Medford Trust Co., lent $12,500 to Edwin T. McKnight, its president, without knowing what the money was to be used for and later discovered he had taken mortgages on property mortgaged by the bank.

His hazy recollection of these deals and whether or not he had subsequently been repaid out of money lent by the bank were points in dispute today at the continued hearing of Bank Commissioner Guy's bill in equity seeking to hold McKnight, Mrs. McKnight and 22 directors of the bank individually responsible for its losses.

The degree of blind trust with which he lent money to McKnight was the subject of a sarcastic trend of interrogation by Robert T. Bushnell, the bank commissioner's counsel, who attacked the witnesses claim of having no knowledge and memory of certain deals.

McKNIGHT MAKES TOUCH

Cushing lent McKnight $5000 on one occasion and $7500 on another and got it all back but he denied McKnight ever told him he wouldn't lose even if the bank did.

"Did you hold mortgages which the Medford Trust Co. also held?" Bushnell asked, shortly after resumption of the hearing before Master Charles W. Blood in superior court.

"Well," began Cushing, "McKnight at one time asked me if I had any money——"

Q. (Interrupting)—Which mortgages did you hold? A.—I think it was the Catherine L. Boyden and the Seigel mortgage.

Q.—Did you hold a fourth mortgage in Farrington st.? A.—I don't know who or what it was. My transaction was with Eaton (McKnight's law partner) and McKnight.

WHERE MONEY CAME FROM

Q.—You were paid off $5000 with interest? A.—Yes, on Aug. 1, 1929.

Q.—Did you know where the $5000 was coming from? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know $5000 came out of $9000 advanced by the bank to the Reserve Securities Co.? A.—No. I never heard of it or knew what it was.

Q.—Well, you did not pay much attention at directors' meetings did you? A.—I think I did.

Q.—Do you deny that you were paid $5000 out of money advanced by the bank to the Reserve Securities Co. A.—I was paid by Eaton and McKnight.

DIDN'T KNOW OF LOAN

Q.—Did you know what you were lending money to McKnight for? A.—No. They brought me a Catherine Boyden note and I did not see the mortgage.

Q.—Did you know the bank had lent money on that property? A.—No.

Cushing said he didn't know when he gave the money to McKnight what McKnight was going to do with it.

Q.—Did you use the same degree of care in passing on matters for the bank as you did in handing over $5000 to McKnight? A.—I used as much, certainly.

Q.—No more? A.—I did in certain cases.

Q.—What cases? A.—It was a matter of personal confidence in the man. He never disappointed me.

Q.—Did you also hold a mortgage in Hancock st., Quincy? A.—I don't know but on Aug. 8, 1929, I lent McKnight $7500.

He said he didn't know what the money was for.

Q.—Did you know the bank was lending depositors funds on the property? A.—No.

Q.—On each of these instances, you got your money in full? A.—Yes.

Master Blood interjected a question as to whether Cushing had noticed if the checks he got in payment were Medford Trust Co. checks. Witness replied he never noticed, that he considered the loans personal loans to McKnight.

Q. On May 1, 1928, you attended a directors' meeting at which the Reserve Securities Co. had a $14,000 loan approved on Farrington st. property. Do you remember that? A. No.

NOT PROMPTED

Q. You were present at the meeting and yet it made no impression on you at all that you held a mortgage on the property? A. I did not know I held a mortgage.

Q. Have you been told such convenient answers as, 'I don't know' and 'I don't remember?'. A. I have not been instructed except to tell the truth.

Q—Did McKnight ever tell you anything to the effect that while the bank might lose you were being taken care of? A—No.

He said he first learned where the $5000 loan went when he looked on his income book for the internal revenue tax and found the name of Catherine L. Boyden. Prior to that, he said, he didn't know he held the Boyden mortgage or that the bank had taken a mortgage prior to his.

He was apponted vice-president of the Medford Trust Associates by McKnight. This was an investment association, he said, but he couldn't say how many meetings were held. Nor could he remember the exact name of a New Bedford bank in which he had been a stockholder. He was a stockholder of the Fidelity Trust Co.

OPPOSED TWO LOANS

Q.—Were you impressed at all by the reading of the bank commissioner's report in 1929? A.—It was read very carefully and any suggestion tended to impress us.

Q.—Isn't it true that you did not do anything at any meetings except vote approval to anything brought up by McKnight or the finance committee? A.—It is not true—never!

He spoke of two loans which he personally had opposed. One was to the Brotherhood Coal Co., whose officers were indicted. McKnight had said it would be a "good account," bue he voted against it. The other was R. L. Palmer Lumber Co. account.

Q.—Did you question why Tragoa (a Leominster contractor, did not get loans in Leominster instead of coming down to Medford and getting more than $400,000 from the Medfordt Trust Co.? A.—No.

Q.—You never inquired as to the total indebtedness of Mrs. McKnighmt at the bank, did you? A.—No. We passed on individual loans. They were never grouped.

CAN'T RECALL PROTEST

Q.—How's your recollection with reference to any reports made at any meeting of the directors by the bank commissioners? A.—Every report of the bank commissioners was read at the first meeting of directors after it had been received. Every request or suggestion was immediately answered by the president or treasurer and a copy of the letter or reply was read at the next meeting of the directors.

Cushing couldn't recall any communication from the bank commissioner in 1929 with reference to loans made to Mrs. McKnight by the savings deprtment, or with reference to loans made to John F. Fitzgerald, the Serdan Trust, the Seminary Trust, Catherine L. Boyden, Reserve Securities or Dunbar Contracting Co.

Will of Middleboro Woman Contested

Amherst, N. S., Aug. 16 (AP)—Contestation proceedings in connection with the will of the late Sophia O'Brien, of Middleboro, Mass., began today before County Court Judge George Patterson.

J. A. Hanway is acting for two relatives of Miss O'Brien in Attleboro, who had been named principal heirs in a first will, but were left small amounts in the final testament.

PROBE LOSS OF EVERETT FILES

Investigation into the mysterious disappearance of Everett fire department documents was begun today by Mayor Michael C. O'Neill and Chairman James F. O'Connor of the fire commission, although they denied that records of financial transactions in the department could not be replaced.

The documents disappeared two weeks ago from the officers of the board of fire commissioners in the Central fire station, Broadway.

Mayor O'Neill and O'Connor both said that the matter will be proned entirely without police aid, although O'Connor admitted that the fire department members have been quietly looking for some clue since the vanishing of the records.

When asked if he thought the disappearance of the records was an "inside job," Chairman O'Connor said he could not comment, although he pointed out that there are approximately 60 men stationed at Central station, with a man on watch during all 24 hours of the day.

Neither the mayor nor O'Connor would comment further until after they have conferred with other members of the fire commission.

Indiana Ratifies "Lame Duck" Bill

Indianapolis, Aug. 16 (INS)—Indiana today had ratified the Norris "lame duck" amendment to the federal Constitution. The ratification vote in the Senate was 41 to 1, and in the House 77 to 5.

Squirrel Hunter

Little Margaret Henchan, 4, of Alpine st., Roxbury, anxious to find out something about the lives and habits of squirrels, decided to trail one in Franklin Park. Her mother, alarmed at her absence, pulled in the citizens' alarm in the park, and before you could say much of anything Margaret was returned by a squad of police, much bewildered by the excitement she caused.

52,000 SIGN FOR KELIHER

Sheriff John A. Keliher today filed his Democratic nomination papers and on them appeared the signatures of 52,000 Suffolk County voters, the largest number of signatures ever filed by any candidate for county office.

The papers were filed with Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook by Frederick T. Curtin, past-commander of the West Roxbury Post, American Legion.

At the same time, Sheriff Keliher said:

"I am deeply grateful to the 52,000 Democratic voters of Suffolk County who signed my nomination papers for sheriff.

"I view it as a practical manifestation of confidence in my administration.

"I take this means of thanking them one and all and pledge a continuance of that policy which commands such a flattering endorsement."

A BIG START FOR KELIHER

FRED F. CURTIN SHERIFF KELIHER

A record breaking campaign got off to a big start yesterday when Fred F. Curtin, of West Roxbury, a member of Sheriff John A. Keliher's campaign committee, walked into the sheriff's office at the Charles St. Jail, bearing a bundle of 54,000 Democratic signatures to re-nominate him to the office of sheriff of Suffolk County. Here's the sheriff looking 'em over. This is largest number of signatures ever gathered in history of Suffolk County. (Staff Photo.)

CHIEF ASKS AID OF MASKED REPORTER

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright 1932, by Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

New Bedford, Aug. 16—I am in receipt today of an invitation from Robert E. Speed, agent in charge of prohibition enforcement in this decidedly wet area, to give him inside information I have gathered relative to rum-running, graft and official laxity, with particular regard to Westport or "Smugglers' Paradise."

Mr. Speed and his subordinate, Mr. Stevens, have gone to great lengths in the past few days to ascertain my identity and, being unsuccessful, issued the invitation through a local newspaper together with other remarks which I shall discuss at length.

Masked Reporter

First, I would remind Mr. Speed that I work for a newspaper and not for the police or prohibition agents.

Secondly, I would inform Mr. Speed that it is against my personal policy and the policy of this newspaper to act as informer for any agency other than its readers.

And thirdly, I would point out to Mr. Speed that he has had more opportunities than I to acquaint himself with the conditions that prevail in his own district and which he denies exist though I have absolute proof of every line I have written regarding them.

Mr. Speed says in the local newspaper:

"If this Masked Reporter would frankly confer with us as to his information we would gladly co-operate to put down the nuisances he describes. I would say, however, that he certainly does not know the liquor situation in the Cape district, which includes Westport."

PROOF AVAILABLE

Let me take this occasion to inform Mr. Speed that I print only the facts and in cases where I have made direct charges I have taken added precaution of obtaining legal proof that my statements are accurate.

For instance, I came across a situation today in Assonet with which Mr. Speed may be familiar. I provided myself with legal proof of that condition. I was not surprised to learn in the same paper that Chief of Police Norman B. Hopkinson, of Westport, had denied what I had written about his territory, more commonly called "Smugglers Paradise."

WORK LAUDED

I was surprised to read, however, that the Chief had not read my story of widespread smuggling there. One of the leading citizens of that seaside resort told me everyone he saw on the street was reading it and it was the subject of discussion in every home. I would suggest that Chief Hopkinson get in touch with some of his fellow-townsmen and learn their opinions as to the accuracy of that story.

I cannot pass along to other things without inquiring of the the inspector at the New Bedford Custom House who "laughed it off" if he ever heard of the small boy who whistled as he walked past the graveyard.

Tomorrow I shall take up other remarks made by various officials in this area, but the rest of today's piece I shall devote to those kindly persons who have sent me messages of congratulation on getting at the cold truth of the situation here and hereabouts.

The distinguished citizen of Fall River who wrote so nicely of my "Two-bit and sawbuck" pool story has my earnest apology for the error I made. He quotes a racket authority in Fall River as telling him I erred in stating that bootleggers pay the "police protection pool" $10 per week each. As a matter of fact the booties pay $15 per week each for the privilege of selling pints. I am sorry, doctor.

The gentleman from Tiverton has my profound thanks for wising me up as the boys say, to the story of the two 16-year-old boys found by Rhode Island dry agents operating a cellar still at $1 per day. I agree with you, sir, that the story may discourage other big-hearted still bosses from airing children in an effort to reduce expenses.

REPORTERS' REPLIES

To J. H. N.—You write well but some time I hope to show you the error of your ways. The news is right under your eyes. Is there some one preventing you from getting it?

To W.—It was great stuff and it came earlier than I expected. When I return I'll check that information. Won't that be fun?

Commander Foote—Will you tell me why the same policy which you say caused the transfer of Corp. Thompson does not affect the Barnstable Barracks?

Inspector Hart—Aren't you sorry you allowed yourself to be quoted that way?

Chief Hopkinson—I expect to take a run over to your town tomorrow. But you got the wrong car numbers. You and Mr. Stevens.

N. and J.—Sorry, boys, you were secretly indicted today. But of course you know that was on the way long before I came on the scene.

Joe D.—I expect to go into that when I leave here. Hold off on the letter till I give you the word. It will make a grand story.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American the Masked Reporter will give further accounts of his survey of Rhode Island cities and towns, which are overridden by the New York rum syndicate and many of whose officials are under the whip of gang rule.

Bunk That Goes Out of This Campaign

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE are to be congratulated on the fact that in the very nature of things the speakers with whom the public will be patient in this campaign will deal with the realities and get down to cases.

Never within the memory of living man has there been a campaign in which bunk has counted for less. The deluge of disaster has swept away so many myths, fallacies, and falsehoods that there is little left but the realities.

It is interesting at this juncture to put down the "arguments" and "appeals" that no longer will serve. The mere utterance of them in the present situation would be a mockery of public intelligence and worse than useless. Let's see what some of them are.

• • •

"Democratic Panic" Bugaboo Exploded

"The Republican party means prosperity and the Democratic party means panic."

It is significant of the short memories of the majority of people that this ever has been able to serve a purpose. Most of the panics during the last 72 years have occurred under Republican Administrations. That of 1873, which was the worst until the present one, came during the Grant regime.

There were periods of mild depression under Republican Administrations until 1893, when another serious panic came. It was not due to Cleveland, for it struck before Cleveland was seated in his chair and before he or his party had been able to do anything. It was hurrying along during the last years of the Harrison Republican Administration, and it is now historically known that Harrison and Foster, his Secretary of the Treasury, sat with bated breath toward the close, hoping it would not strike until Cleveland took office.

That panic, however, was put down as a Cleveland or Democratic panic.

No one believes today that Cleveland was in any way responsible.

Panic of 1907 Was Under G. O. P. Rule

Then came the money panic of 1907, which was far more serious than most of us were permitted to know. It carried some rather dreadful possibilities. All over the land banks took advantage of the right to pay out on any one day only a certain proportion of a depositor's money. President Roosevelt was forced to sit down with John Pierpont Morgan, who drove a hard bargain on the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company as a condition for saving the situation.

That was under a Republican Administration.

Then came the mild depression after the war—which everyone whose brains would not rattle in a mustard seed knows was inevitable. It was just after the war factories had shut down and turned their workers out, and the demobilization of the army added a great many to the unemployed. It was the depression of the period of readjustment to peace conditions, and it had no political significance whatever. No one honestly says it had.

• • •

Hoover Campaign Acme of Sheer Bunk

Four years ago this old fraud about "Republican Administrations meaning prosperity and Democratic Administrations panic" was used aggressively. It was largely a whispering campaign—for Mr. Hoover's campaign was largely that sort. Agents were sent to the small business men in a certain section of New York City where Smith had a large personal following to warn them that the election of Smith would be bad for business.

Meanwhile, Mr. Hoover was gravely assuring the nation that his party had put the business of the country on the basis of permanent prosperity, that his election would mean "high wages and handsome dividends," and that because of the genius of Harding and Coolidge statesmanship, we were entering upon the "elimination of poverty."

Nothing in the way of sheer bunk has ever surpassed that campaign.

At Elizabethtown, Tenn. Mr. Hoover said that prosperity or depression was a matter of government, and the implication was quite clear.

• • •

Present Depression Explodes G. O. P. Claim

Now, under Mr. Hoover, we have the most devastating panic the nation has ever known, with more human misery than any one living has ever seen, and it has lasted throughout his administration. We need not expand upon the theme. There are the facts. Look out the window and you can see them.

Under the circumstances no Republican speaker not utterly bereft of a sense of humor will have the temerity to haul out the "full dinner pail" or to tell the people that a Democratic victory would mean a panic.

Nothing could be worse than what we have.

• • •

"Fit to Govern" Bunk Also Hit

There is another piece of buncombe that has served for many years—"The Republican party is the only party fit to govern." It would require a lot of hardihood, under existing conditions, to reiterate that statement now. Our present plight has been partly brought about and made infinitely worse than it might have been by the governing of the Republican party.

It is fair to say we do not think the wisest men in the Republican party are at the helm. But the men at the helm who have shown such marked ineptitude in statesmanship, such lack of vision and courage, such deficiency in constructive capacity, have been endorsed by the party which is asking the people to continue these failures at the helm four years more.

With ten million jobless, thirty million farmers bankrupt, banks closed, bankruptcies in business, an appalling deficit in the Treasury, unprecedented taxes, the smug assurance that "the Republican party is the only party fit to govern" would seem silly to the average man.

We shall always cherish as a piece of rare humor the overweening question submitted by Charles Evans Hughes from the stump four years ago to a New York audience:

"Would you entrust the business of the country to a Democrat?"

Well, the people did not.

• • •

Whispering, Too, Out of Fashion

Four years ago there was much whispering.

That regarding religion is out of fashion now. We shall hear little of that.

But there was whispering, too, regarding prohibition. They whispered to liberals in New York and Jersey that Mr. Hoover's proposed commission was Mr. Hoover's way out of getting rid of prohibition. "Leave it to Hoover"—in a whisper.

That is out of the question now. His position is plain. His party's position can be read in its platform. And the Democrat position in its platform.

Thus there is not much left to talk about but real things, and if real things are talked about the campaign will be worth while. Life is too serious with most of us today to make flippant claptrap tolerable.

EX-PROSECUTOR FACES GALLOWS

San Francisco, Aug. 16 (INS)—With a swift parade of minor witnesses the State continued today to present evidence which it hopes will send to the gallows Frank J. Egan, for years public defender of the unfortunate, for the alleged murder fo Mrs. Jessie Scott Hughes, his aged client and benefactress.

The State witnesses were being called in an effort to establish that the motive back of the alleged slaying was an effort to cover up misapplication of funds entrusted to Egan's car eby another aged woman.

DELAYS SCHOOL OPENING

In order to save $5000 to the town, the schools of Saugus will open a week later this year, it was announced today by Fred B. Willis, chairman of the school board.

The exultant pupils need not exult too soon, however, for the week will be made up during the Christmas holidays.

The school opening is delayed from September 12 to the 19th on recommendation of Town Treasurer Harold F. Dodge who said that the treasury is empty now and will be empty on the regular school opening date, which would necessitate the borrowing of money. A week later the town will have money.

GARNER READY TO SPEED UP CAMPAIGN

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—Speaker John N. Garner, having hurled a downright denial at foes who were described as "whispering" that he scratched Alfred E. Smith in 1928, set out today determined to put the full strength of his Texas emphasis on economic issues in his campaign for the vice-presidency.

After a series of conferences, Garner and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, running mate whom he described as his "boss," were declared to be in full accord on the issues of the campaign. The Speaker expected to go to Washington today and then home to Uvalde, Tex., before starting his speaking tour later.

Garner said he favored taking the government from the few and restoring it to the people. He indicated he intended to stress economic problems rather than prohibition, and to attack the Hoover administration on the grounds of mismanagement.

It was at a gathering of leaders presided over by James A. Farley that Garner gave his views yesterday on Alfred E. Smith, bigotry and prohibition. He attacked bigotry, denied what had been described as a "whispering statement" that he had not voted for Smith in 1928, and said that on prohibition he was an "outright repealist."

"I said in 1928, in two speeches I delivered in behalf of Smith, that I believed he was one of the greatest leaders America ever produced.

"And I still believe that," he added.

BAN ON JOBLESS PARTY LIFTED

St. Louis, Aug. 16 (AP)—Obstacles to the holding of the Jobless-Liberty party's national convention tomorrow and Thursday at Creve Coeur Lake Speedway, 15 miles west of St. Louis, apparently had been removed today.

State and county health officials, who had warned that they would start injunction proceedings unless sanitary facilities met with approval, today had withdrawn their threat after a conference with W. H. (Coin) Harvey at which they were assured that the attendance would be only a fraction of the 50,000 predicted earlier.

DRYS AGAIN ASK BORAH TO RUN

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 16 (AP)—Two national prohibition leaders again have asked Senator William E. Borah to seek the presidency as head of a prohibition ticket, and the Idaho statesman is expected to make his decision today.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, chairman of the board of temperance and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Leigh Colvin, national chairman of the Prohibition party which recently tendered the nomination to Borah, conferred with the senator last night and renewed their plea. Borah declined to comment.

Should Senator Borah accept the proposal, Dr. Wilson said, he would carry 10 Southern states in the election and enough central western and eastern states to be elected.

Bourbon 'Prince' Slain by Spanish Woman

Paris, Aug. 16 (AP)—A man whose papers identified him as Prince Edgard de Bourbon was found dead in a hotel room today, his throat slashed by a razor.

At about the same time a Spanish woman who gave her name as Condelaria Brau Soler appeared at police headquarters and said she had killed the prince after a quarrel in which he threatened her with a razor. She killed in self-defense, she said.

Police said the quarrel grew out of an alleged discovery by the woman that the prince had married an American girl whose identity was not immediately determined.

The identification papers found on the man's body said he was born in 1870 at Rankelstein, Austria, son of Alice de Bourbon.

In 1916 the Italian secret police in Greece were concerned about the presence in that country of a man who gave his name as Edgar de Bourbon and carried an American passport issued in that name. He said he was a colonel in the American army on leave of absence and that his wife was the former Clara Conger of Cleveland, O., daughter of the former American minister to China and ambassador to Mexico.

The man claimed relationship with the royal family of Asutria-Hungary, but police were said at the time to believe he was an impostor whose real name was Carlo Lorioli.

THUGS BEAT MAN IN DORCHESTER

Because he fooled four holdup men by having no money, Herman Meyers of Hosmer st., Dorchester, had to take a beating today near his home.

Two of the bandits went through Meyers' pockets while the other pair held him at gunpoint. All four punched and kicked him when the first two reported no money. Four youths were arrested later and identified by Meyers, police said.

DOG LOST, BOY SPURNS FOOD

Not only has Russell White, Jr., 10, of Wamputck rd., Dedham, lost his pal, but he has also lost his appetite. And, worse still, he just can't feel happy and has absolutely refused to go out and play with his chums.

Russell White

Until Sunday night, Russell was a happy kid for he had the companionship of "the best dog that ever was."

Then the world collapsed about Russell's ears. Sunday night his fox terrier didn't come back from his canine constitutional. Since his disappearance Russell has eaten only one meal and explains to his mother that "my appetite went when my dog went."

The dog is a smooth hair fox terrier. It is a female, has a stub tail, a black and brown back, and white legs.

Child's Pursuit of Squirrel Brings Police for Hunt

Margaret Henehan, 4, of 31 Alpine st., Roxbury, decided to trail a squirrel to its den in Franklin Park and as a result police came scurrying to the scene.

Following a prolonged absence of her daughter, Mrs. Henehan pulled the citizen's alarm. A car, with four bluecoats of the Jamaica Plain station, responded.

Mollison Plans to Start Hop Today

Dublin, Aug. 16 (US)—J. A. Mollison, British aviator, planning a three-day transatlantic flight to New York and return, said he will get away today from Portmarnock Beach if reports of southwest winds off Newfoundland continue overnight.

Mollison will carry with him in his plane, named "Heart's Content," a letter for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, given to him by American Minister Sterling.

FRANCE GETS ITALIAN SCARE

Paris, Aug. 16 (INS)—French naval experts, watching with keen interest the Italian naval maneuvers in the Mediterranean, concluded today that France would be cut off from Africa entirely in the event of war.

Supporters of increased naval armaments declare Italy already has parity with France because a majority of the 100 vessels participating in the Mediterranean represent the most modern type of warship.

The maneuvers, according to the French viewpoint, were staged by Italy in an effort to show she is mistress of the Mediterranean and in a position to cut France off from Algeria and Morocco, her African possessions. The Italian maneuvers ended in a combined sea and air attack upon a sham convoy from Africa.

French observers see more than a coincidence in the fact that the British Adriatic maneuvers, with two sons of King George on hand, got under way from Corfu before the smoke of the Italian vessels had died away.

N. H. Farmer Suffers Heavy Loss by Fire

Seven cows, a horse, a bull, two calves, two pigs and 25 chickens, as well as 25 tons of hay, farm implements and wagons were destroyed.

Textile Mills Show Increasing Business

Shut down since June 9, the Gainesville mill and the Pacolet Manufacturing Company were reopened yesterday. The Chicopee mill, already in daily operation, instituted day and night shifts.

THE DRINK THAT MAKES A PAUSE REFRESHING

NURMI FIGHT ON OLYMPIC BAN CENTERS HERE

FANNING

—With GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

Tragedy in Three Acts. ↕ Unglorious Adventure.
Niobe, Turn on Weeps. Wasn't a Leprechaun.
Stroll in Moonlight. She Beat Eddie Tolan.

Another Pep Story. Read It and Weep!

MY DOG PEP and I now are firmer, truer friends than ever. We have been hit by twin barbs of outrageous fortune; both bitten by ingratitude, sharper than a serpent's tongue. We are companions in sorrow and travail. We have suffered—oh, how we have suffered! Disdained by everyone. Avoided, ostracised. Deserted by our dear ones. Oh, the tragedy of it! Get out your handkerchiefs, and we'll tell you about it. Those who have tears prepare to shed them now! Niobe, turn on the weeps! To begin with it started with the moonlight. The moon, that great golden orange hanging on the boughs of heaven, has caused lots of trouble. Oh, what a night! And, oh, what a moon, bathing the whole countryside in its silvery glow. With the moon shining through the pines, Pep and I were seized with an irresistible yen to go walking in the moonlight. We wanted to wander where——

"Somewhere there stretches a country road,
Where crickets are chanting their evening ode,
And bending branches paint a shade,
Where moonbeams glimmer, and gleam and fade,
And will o' the wisp in the distance wade."

IT WOULD HAVE been all right, perhaps, if Pep and I had stuck to that country road. But we wandered off it—into trouble. We came to a stretch of woodland and meadow wrapt in the moon's white magic. Into it we plunged. The romance of it engulfed us. We began to see things. The dryads and woodnymphs came out from behind the trees. I don't know how she came to swim so far inland, but there on a rock beside a purling stream reclined a mermaid combing her long golden hair and looking at us with the come hither look in her languorous eyes. We started toward her, but suddenly she was gone.

"Did you see her, Pep?" we whispered.

"Sure I did," answered Pep, who is Irish and therefore eerie. "The glades and the dells are full of the Little People tonight. Listen to the cricket orchestra playing for them to dance.

"Whis-s-st!" suddenly exclaimed Pep, the hair raising up on his neck, his nostrils dilating and his ears coming to a full cock. "I could swear I saw a leprechaun! He's the little red-jacketed shoemaker who'll give you any three wishes you want if you only catch him. Bedad, I'm right! There he goes!

"Into the bushes scurried Pep.

"Ochone! Ochone! It wasn't a leprechaun. It was a SKUNK!"

FOLKS, WE'RE GOING to spare you some of the harrowing details. Sufficeth it to say that after a weary journey, filled with Pep's sneezings and coughings and my own totally unreligious but fervent cussing, we arrived at the door of our domicile. A little soft music, professor. The sad part of the drama has arrived. The curtain on the second act arises. I'm "Pa."

PA (STILL HOLDING HIS NOSE)—"Demmit, Pep, you can't come in! You'll have to stay out all night. Tonight, tomorrow night, the next night, and goodness knows how many more nights. That's all there is about it!"

Pep (down on his foreshoulder still rubbing his schnozzola into the dirt trying to rid himself of the sting and smell)—"W-w-r-r-ruff! Kerchoo-o-o! W-w-r-r-ruff!"

Ma (opening the door and seeing us standing in the moonlight—"Isn't it time for you and Pep to come to—— Heavens! George Underwood, have you brought home a skunk?"

Pa (taking the handkerchief away from his nose temporarily)—— "No, Ma, I haven't a skunk with me. But Pep ran afoul of one over there in the meadow. It's all right, though, I'm going to let him stay out all night."

Ma (coughing violently and closing the door to a crack)——"Yes, and—Kerchoo! Kercho-o-o-o!—you're going to stay out all night, too!"

INTERLUDE. Business of arguing, begging, pleading with the Missus. "Pluheese let me in. What am I to do? Where am I to go? You've just got to let me in. Pluh-h-e-e-ese let me in! Pluh-h-e-e-ese!"

MA (STILL COUGHING, hisses through a crack in the door)—— "No, George Underwood, you're not coming into the house with those clothes on. Go out in the little clump of birches behind the house and disrobe. In the meantime I'll go and unlock the back door and put some water in the maid's bathtub. As soon as you undress run right in the house and into that tub and stay there for the rest of the night!"

Bang! The door closes violently. But not before we hear George, Jr., who the rumpus has brought downstairs, cough and snort, "Whew! Talk about tear gas!"

WE RETIRE TO the birches behind the house, booting Pep and telling him to keep as far as possible away from us as we go. Off go coat and trousers. Off go the undies. In the moonlight there we stand as naked as an onion.

"Foh de lan's sake!" exclaims a sepulchral voice behind us, frightening us into a two-foot leap in the air and whirl. "For de Lawd's sake!"

It was the colored maid next door, returning after a tryst with her man. We were more startled and surprised than she was. As we gazed dumbfounded she emitted another hysterical "Foh de Lawd's sake!" and, picking up her skirts, did a hundred in nothing flat down the path. Talk about Eddie Tolan!

THE LAST SCENE. A fat man, nude as Venus arising from the seafoam, but still keeping a dying clutch on his handkerchief, making the back door in three jumps, a white streak in the white moonlight.

PROLOGUE. It is three days since the tragedy, but poor Pep still has to bed outdoors under the evergreens. We still eat our breakfast alone. Our friends still avoid us like the pestilence. As we write Ray Helgesen, sitting as far as possible away on our right, turns up a disdainful nose. Believe us, Pep and I know that trouble is spelt with a capital "T." The bonds between us are cemented closer than ever.

BROWNS' BOSS ONE OF FEW SURE OF JOB

By JOE CASHMAN

Red Bill Killifer, who leads his St. Louis Brownies to the Fens this afternoon for a three-game series with the Red Sox, is one of baseball's favored few.

He knows where his next meal is coming from for another year, at least, having been recently signed to retain his present berth in '33.

Before the official announcement by Owner Phil Ball that Red Bill would stay on the job, there was considerable doubt about it. Ball is an intimate friend and great admirer of Rogers Hornsby and it was rumored that the "Rajah" might be given the St. Louis position.

If you ask us, Killifer deserved to be signed again. The Brownies have steadily improved during the three years he has been on the job.

To his way of thinking, he doesn't need much extra strength to have a pennant contender in the next campaign.

YOUNG BALL CLUB

"I have a young ball club that's getting better all the time while most of the teams above us have seen their best days and are on the down-grade," he pointed out today.

"My infielders, with the exception of Oscar Melillo, at second, are all in their early twenties and have been in the majors less than two full seasons. Bruce Campbell in right is playing his first season as a regular. Schulte in center, while more experienced, has several good seasons left.

"Most of my hurlers are comparatively young and should keep getting better for several years to come. 'Rick' Ferrell, my regular catcher, is one of the best young receivers in the business.

"There's plenty of youth, speed and ambition in my lineup. A little more hitting strength and another winning pitcher or two and we'll make all rivals step another season."

BOSS PRAISES BURNS

Killifer is loud in his praise of Irving Burns the Somerville boy who does his first sacking.

"Burns should develop into an outstanding first baseman," Bill said. "Last year, his first with us, he led the league in fielding, but he didn't hit very well. That didn't worry me. I knew he had hit everywhere he had been before joining us and felt sure he would become a consistent sticker for me. He didn't make me wait long. He's our heaviest hitter today with a mark of .320. There's little he doesn't know about playing the bag and he's one of the fastest men in the loop. I have no first base worries.

This series will mark the final appearance of the Browns here this season and also the opening of the final Western invasion of the Fens.

Olympics Going Yet if Chess Included

Pasadena, Aug. 16 (AP)—Only two matches were completed in the first session of the international chess congress early today, the other four matches being continued until tonight.

Capt. Jose J. Arizia, Mexican champion, suffered defeat at the hands of Harry Borocho of Beverly Hills, Calif., champion, and Arthur W. Drake of Portland, Ore., Pacific coast champion, defeated F. C. Foster, Chicago master, in the two matches that were completed. The tournament will continue two weeks.

WEILAND GOES TO OTTAWA SEXTET

Mr. Charles F. Adams, president of the Boston Bruins, greeted the morning's sun with a broad grin, not to say a definite chuckle today.

Cooney Weiland

Mr. Adams was chuckling to think that he alone, of all the interested people in Boston, knew that Cooney Weiland, center iceman for the Bruins and chief cog in the famous Weiland "Dynamite" line, had been traded to Ottawa.

It was all a deep, dark secret between Mr. Mr. Adams and himself, apparently. The deal which sent Cooney to Ottawa was for nobody's information. And so, as the day wore on, and the news was kept a secret, Mr. Adams' initial chuckle grew to a gargantuan roar of laughter.

But, stay. Our secret operative No. 52 found out all about Cooney's trade to the Ottawa club from the Bruins.

What monetary consideration went with the Weiland deal, or whether it was a player-and-money arrangement, or simply a straight cash sale, Operator No. 52 did not discover. He'll know in a few days.

This imformation would seem to indicate that the Ottawa Club was going to reorganize for the coming season.

HELEN JACOBS MEETS BOSTON TENNIS STAR

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 16 (INS)—Helen Jacobs, of California, the favorite to win the women's national tennis championship, faces Miss Virginia Rice of Boston today at the Forest Hills courts.

The play is in the second round, Miss Jacobs having drawn a bye in the first round in which all the leading stars advanced yesterday.

Mrs. Anna McCune Harper of Oakland, Cal., seeded second women's star, almost brought a tragedy in the opening play, just avoiding a defeat by Eleanor Goss, who as long ago as 1918 was a national finalist with Molla Mallory. Mrs. Harper finally overcome the veteran, 6—2, 5—7, 7—5.

ENGLISH STAR ADVANCES

Mrs. Elsie Pittman, England, top-seeded foreigner, advanced with a victory over Cecilia Riegel of Philadelphia. Her game indicated she might be a possible finalist. Mrs. Pittman is seeded sixth and placed in the opposite half of the draw from Miss Jacobs.

Marjorie Morrill Painter of Dedham, Mass., seeded third, won from Mrs. Christian Muhl, and Josephine Cruickshank, Santa Ana, Calif., defeated Eugenie Sampson, Chicago. Virginia Hilleary of Philadelphia, the only other active American seeded performer, advanced at the expense of Olga Kallos.

MARJORIE SACHS PERFORMS

In addition to the Jacobs-Rice match today, the feature tilts include Mrs. Pittman against Marjorie Sachs; Mrs. John Van Ryn against Miss Clara Zinke; Miss Caroline Babcock against Mrs. D. A. Burke. In the doubles Mrs. Pittman and Miss Joan Ridley, England, will play Mrs. W. V. Hester and Mrs. P. B. Hawk.

LUTZE FACES LEAHMAN

A newcomer to local wrestling is Scotty Dawkins, who is down for a time limit bout in the semi-final clash with Stanley Pinto.

MAIN EVENT
Nick Lutze vs. Charlie Leahman.
(Finish match, best two in three falls).
SEMI-WINDUP
Stanley Pinto vs. Scotty Dawkins.
PRELIMINARIES
Jack Ganson vs. Axel Anderson.
Sam Cordovana vs. Lloyd Stuart.

OLYMPIC GAMES GREAT TONIC FOR PEACE

By FRANK G. MENKE

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (INS)—The Olympiad of 1932 accomplished more toward restoration of international amity and rekindling of the spirit of brotherly love than any other force, including all the diplomats of the world, since the last volley was fired in the World War.

Under the banner of "Sport for Sport's sake," there was grouped, shoulder to shoulder, through a period of almost a month, the sons of men within whom once flamed a hatred for the other. In the fellowship of athletic combat, there were games supervised by the older men, those of the middle years who, a trifle more than a decade ago, were at each others throats.

PEACE WEDGE DRIVEN

Into the Olympiad of 1928 there was wedged merely the edge of the chisel that was to split asunder all the enmities. In the Olympiad of 1932, this wedge was driven with terrific force by the propelling power of California's arrangements, straight through the heart

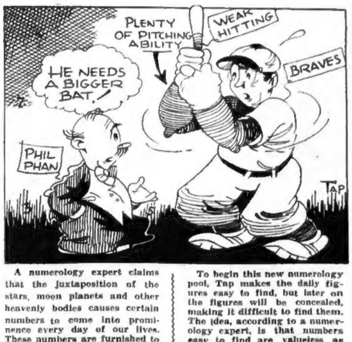
TAP'S COMBINATION TIPS



A numerology expert claims that the juxtaposition of the stars, moon planets and other heavenly bodies causes certain numbers to come into prominence every day of our lives. These numbers are furnished to Tap, our staff artist, who will incorporate the favored figures in a regular daily sport cartoon.

To begin this new numerology pool, Tap makes the daily figures easy to find, but later on the figures will be concealed, making it difficult to find them. The idea, according to a numerology expert, is that numbers easy to find are valueless as pool tips. Watch for the little numbers, if you're looking for pool suggestions.

DAVE JONES ELIMINATES SIDNEY WOOD

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16 (AP)—Dave Jones of New York, today provided the Newport Casino tennis tournament with its first major upset by eliminating Sidney Wood of New York, seeded third, in a bruising extra set third round match by scores of 3—6, 6—3, 8—6. The unseeded player's ability to handle Wood's soft, but tricky service, carried him to victory.

The list of foreign seedings lost a member when J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., conquered John S. Olliff of England, ranked fourth in the draw, in another overtime contest by scores of 6—3, 3—6, 6—2.

THIRD ROUND

Wilmer Allison, Austin Texas, defeated Herbert L. Bowman, New York, 6—2, 6—2.

J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., defeated John S. Olliff, England, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2.

QUINCY WOMEN IN NET PLAY

The Quincy Tennis Club will hold their annual women's singles tennis championship starting this afternoon on their own courts.

The draw:

Somerset Pals Chalk Up 27th Victory

The Somerset Pals defeated the Cambridge Orioles at Raymond park, 6 to 1. This victory ran the Pals' string of wins up to 27.

FINN HOPES TO FACE ZABALA AT SALEM, N.H.

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

From unquestionable sources the Boston Evening American learns that Paavo Nurmi, the world's greatest distance runner, whose entry was refused for the Olympic games, will follow Juan Zabala of the Argentine, winner of the Olympic Marathon, into Boston, and the fight to recover Nurmi's lost status as an amateur will be made here in the Hub and before the New England Association of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Finnish organizations have rounded up all of the evidence upon which the International Olympic Committee based its refusal of Nurmi's entry and this evidence will be placed before J. Frank Facey, chairman of the registration committee of the New England Association, and the New England body asked to determine whether or not the Flying Finn violated the amateur rules, and whether he is eligible to continue in amateur competition.

NO POWER TO BAR HIM

The International Olympic Committee did not declare Nurmi a professional. The committee did not, nor did it have the power to, disqualify Nurmi or to bar him as an amateur. What the International Committee did do was simply to refuse Nurmi's entry for the Olympic games and to hold over other possible action on him until the next meeting of the committee. The next meeting does not take place for two years.

NURMI'S STATUS IN DOUBT

The action of the International Olympic Committee left Nurmi's status in doubt. He was compelled to wait two years until the next meeting of the committee or to bring matters to an immediate head by making his entry for some amateur event under the auspices of an official amateur sports governing body.

Nurmi chose the latter course. He will arrive in Boston within the next few days and will file his official entry for the great International Marathon, in which Zabala and other famous runners will compete at Rockingham one week from next Sunday.

Nurmi's filing of his entry will compel the Registration Committee of the New England Association to decide his status. Whatever action is taken by the New England Asociation will be ratified by the National Association of the Amateur Athletic Union.

BARRED ON HEARSAY

This writer is in possession of the full evidence the Finnish organizations will present the New England Association. It is a transcript of the evidence upon which the International Olympic Committee refused Nurmi's entry for the Olympic Games. Careful perusal of it fails to uncover one iota of indubitable evidence against the athlete. The great Finnish runner was barred on hearsay evidence alone.

In only one instance does any witness say outright he gave Nurmi money for competing. That man is a minor German official. Nurmi says the man never gave him a penny in addition to bona fide expenses. Nurmi's word should have equal weight with the German's.

The expense monies received by Nurmi were not in excess of the amount received by any American ball players, tennis stars or star athletes, who are accustomed to traveling "first class" and stopping in the best hotels.

HOSTILE JURY SAT ON CASE

A prominent New England Finnish official this morning declared:

"Nurmi's entry was considered by a hostile jury headed by J. S. Edstrom of Sweden, who in more ways than one repeatedly has shown his jealousy of Finnish athletes. That the Finns, as a whole, understand this was shown by the hostile demonstration staged by more than 5000 Finns in front of the Helsingfors offices of Edstrom, who is a millionaire international manufacturer, the day news of Nurmi's disbarment from the Olympics reached Finland.

"We Finns believe Paavo Nurmi is the greatest distance runner in the world. We know he is a true amateur. We believe that his right to compete as an amateur should not be taken away upon any such flimsy evidence that the International Olympic committee acted upon. We believe that, had Nurmi been permitted to start, he and not Zabala of the Argentine, great runner as the little South American undoubtedly is, would have won the classic Olympic Marathon.

"That is why Nurmi wants to meet Zabala here in the big International Marathon at Rockingham and prove to the world he is still supreme in distance running. The Nurmi case must be brought before some amateur sports governing body, and New England, home of liberty and hotbed of Marathon racing, is the proper spot to fight it out.

"We feel Nurmi will get a square deal in New England. All us Finns ask is a square deal. We will let Nurmi stand or fall on the same flimsy evidence the International Olympic committee figuratively crucified him."

McKECHNIE HOPEFUL OF WINNING PENNANT

BRAVES NEW FIELDER IN BOW TODAY

Special to the Boston American

Chicago, Aug. 16—The league-leading Chicago Cubs open their final long home stay, and one that promises to make or break them for the season, when they take on the fifth-place Braves from Boston in the first of a four-game series, here, this afternoon.

The Cubs now have a one-game lead on the field which includes five other serious pennant contenders. Unless they can materially increase that advantage while at Wrigley Field their chances of winning it won't be worth a plugged nickel. For they must spend the last month on the road and they always forget the secret of winning regularly as soon as they desert the Windy City.

TRIBE IN RACE YET

Though the Braves are in the second [illegible] very [illegible] being only five games behind. And they should give Charlie Grimm's pace setters plenty of trouble. They did so on their first two visits to town and there is no reason for believing they [illegible] on this trip.

"Take a look at Brooklyn," requests Bill in the course of explaining why his charges deserve plenty of consideration. "Two weeks ago, it didn't appear as though the Dodgers had a chance of ever getting out of the second division. Today, they're in third place. They came back with a bang. We can, too. And we will."

Bill needn't advise anybody to take a look at Brooklyn. Everybody was doing it long before he mentioned the Careymen. Opposing managers may not admit it but they all fear the Dodgers above all other rivals.

DODGERS IN STRIDE

The Flatbush crew has been playing by far the best ball in the circuit since mid July, have won 18 of their last 23 games and when they whipped the Pirates yesterday they climbed to within 1½ games of the Cubs and one game of the second place Pittsburgh entry.

The oldest inhabitant doesn't remember when only 1½ games separated the first three clubs in the National League at this late date.

The Phils, in fourth, are only four games back, the Braves but five and even the sixth-place St. Louis Cardinals, defending champions, are in the running, being just six games away from the roof.

Ed "Lefty" Brandt will try to chalk up his 14th win of the campaign for the Braves in the opener today. He probably will draw Lon Warneke, the league's leading pitcher with 17 triumphs to his credit, as his opponent.

Juan Zabala is going to run a Marathon at Rockingham Park. It will be, among other things, the first time anyone ever went from Los Angeles to the Argentine via Salem, N. H.

Still, the longest way 'round is the richest way home.

Depending on the weather, this Marathon will be the plum of the season. Or the lemon.

The runners will train on Revere Beach merry-go-rounds. Eight of fice statisticians figure a Marathon will be 8,987,342¾ laps around the oval.

STANAS, NOLAN IN SWIM MEET

John Stanas of Whitinsville and Bill Nolan of the Boys Club have entered several events in the Park Department championship meet slated for Columbus Park, South Boston on Sunday.

There is also a possibility that Danny Jarosh, winner of the Boston [illegible] will be a contestant in the 300 medley and the backstroke events.

Jarosh, who is a member of Tech [illegible] swimming team, held the 440 freestyle and backstroke records and he is considering a return to competition in the shorter distances.

Stanas, holder of all New England freestyle records for men from 100 meters to 2½ miles, will defend his title in the 220 yards free-style championship event.

The Whitinsville star has but recently returned from Cincinnati where he competed in the Olympic trials despite the fact that he won his heat then by a decisive margin, he was left off the team, officials claiming the time was a shade slow.

Herman, Lavigne Fight in Avon Ring

Joe Monte, former Brockton heavyweight, starts off as matchmaker of the new Queensboro A. C. of Avon and he has Pete Herman of Roxbury facing Matty Lavigne of Taunton at Highland Park, Avon, Thursday.

CADDY CHAMP HAS EARMARKS OF STAR

By BILL GRIMES

Instead of making the mistake which cost him the Massachusetts caddy championship last year at The Country Club, Leo Martin, Oakley, partook sparingly of luncheon after his sensational first round 70 yesterday at the Commonwealth Country Club. And he took the title.

At the end of the first round of the caddy championship last season, Leo Martin was only two strokes behind Stanley Neptune, South Shore. But, a hearty lunch, which he topped off with a quart of milk, caused him so much distress that he came up with a 90 for a 36 hole total of 170, which dropped him back to ninth place.

FINISHED ONE SHOT APART

Two years ago, the Martin twins, Leo and Eddie who appear as alike as two peas, created no end of comment at the Woodland Golf Club when they finished one stroke apart in the first caddy championship.

During the past year, the Martin twins have been developing into top notch golfers. They are noticeably taller and heavier than they were a year ago and their games are much sounder, with Leo having somewhat of an edge over Eddie, for he made the match pair grade in the recent junior championship at Wollaston, while Eddie missed out.

The Martin twins are the same height and weight and they have almost identical golf swings. Leo has the better temperament for he never allows himself to be disturbed while Eddie finds it difficult to forget a bad shot, with the usual result.

LEO COMING CHAMP

With all due respect to past caddy titlists, no titleholder has ever displayed more earmarks of a coming champion than Leo Martin. He has a natural swing, hits all of his shots with unusual firmness for a boy of his age and possesses the happy faculty of seeing the humorous side of a poor shot or a bad break.

Until this season Leo and Eddie were caddies at the Waltham Country Club, but they are now under Tom Donnelly, the caddy master at Oakley. John Cowan, the professional at Oakley; Andy Keefe, the assistant, and Tom Donnelly have been very much interested in the twins this year.

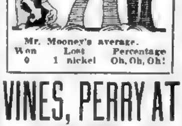
The Martin twins are members of an athletic family, for Hal Andres, former Dartmouth football captain, hockey and baseball player is their cousin, and in all probability they received their first knowledge of golf from their uncle, the Rev. Daniel Keefe.

Reward for Return of Genuine Nickel

Jack Conway has departed for cooler spots than Winthrop sq. for his vacation. With him went the famous Magic Coin, which he uses to pick the winners in all the imbroglios around these parts.

In default of Mr. Conway and the Magic Coin, they let Mr. Mooney toss up a genuine nickel to pick the winner of tonight's fight between Nap Proulx and Manny Davis at Fenway Park.

The feat was performed in the midst of a group of very tall people. The nickel went up, and never came down.



TH' NEXT TIME, SHORTY BURR WON'T EVEN BE NEAR ME!

VINES, PERRY AT LONGWOOD

Bunny Austin and Fred Perry of England and a pair of the world's leading tennis players have entered the 51st national doubles championship which starts at the Longwood Cricket Club on Monday.

Austin and Perry were ranked among the first four players in the world last year and are well known for their play in the Davis Cup competition. One or the other has played in the national doubles tournament at Longwood during the past three years but never have they been together.

In 1929 Austin played with John Olliff; in 1930 Perry played with Olliff, and last year Perry played with Pat Hughes. None of these combinations reached beyond the quarter-finals.

SEEK NEWPORT STARS

Longwood officials have not as yet heard from any of the first 10 American ranked players with the exception of Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill. With this in mind, the Longwood officials will go to Newport today and secure the entries of our leading players who are competing at the Casino tournament.

ZACHOW TRIED TO MAKE PRO DEBUT AT 12

By AD ZACHOW

I was once Young Murphy of Portland for a single night. All in a desperate effort to crash into the professional boxing game when 12 years of age.

I sought out Chick Hayes who was staging boxing shows in Portland. I weighed 95 pounds at the time, and asked Chick to give me a bout. He told me he would pit me against Frisco Kid, a 27-year-old Filipino, in a six-round tussle.

"I don't want my dad to know I'm boxing," I confessed to Hayes. "So bill me as Young Murphy of Portland."

"Okay," replied Hayes. "I don't care what name you go under as long as you can fight."

TRIED TO SELL IDEA

My father usually attended the boxing shows in Portland. So I started some propaganda in an effort to keep him from going to the show at which I planned to battle Frisco Kid. I finally thought I had convinced him it was going to be a poor show, and that it would be better for him to remain at home.

I was jubilant when I arrived at Exposition Hall in Portland. I was to start the battle for ring fame.

I had my hands taped and was waiting for the call to enter the ring when my father entered my dressing room. He was intent upon seeing a friend. His eyes suddenly turned toward me. My father was amazed at the sight of me ready to step into action.

DAD CALLED OFF BOUT

That's as near as I got to the ring that night. My father called my bout off, and I was obliged to watch the show from a ringside seat.

A year later, at the age of 13, found me in the amateurs. I won the bantamweight championship of Maine. I was in the fight game and liked it.

When 14 years of age I turned pro. I felt that it was necessary for me to make this move if I were to move forward in the boxing game.

My first pro bout was with Jackie Cooper and was held at Portland. I won the decision.

Meanwhile, I kept putting on weight and soon weighed 140 pounds. The additional weight increased my hitting power. I won 15 bouts in a row, 10 of them by knockouts.

I didn't care how heavy my opponents were. Frequently I went into action against middleweights and light heavyweights.

BATTERED A HEAVY

Ted Coolidge, a 178 pounder worked in the gym with me one day. He took off his gloves and threw them on the canvas of the ring after I knocked him over with a short left hook to the face followed by a right under the heart.

My ring success in Portland attracted the attention of Albert P. Sherry, city solicitor of Dover, N. H., who has always been interested in sport. Sherry is a former boxer himself, and conducted a gymnasium in Dover, N. H., at the time Patsy Haley and Patsy Sweeney were at the height of their fame.

Sherry tried me out with Big Boy Burgess, a heavyweight, whose affairs he was directing. When I licked Burgess, Sherry told me he would attempt to pilot me to a world's championship.

When I knocked out Tommy Quigley in a round, Bert Patca, boxing promoter at Sanford, Me., suggested that I box two opponents on the same night. Sherry and myself thought the promoter was joking.

FOUGHT TWO IN NIGHT

We were surprised when it was announced that I had been matched to meet Bat Therrian and Kid Aldrick on the same night. Each bout was billed for six rounds.

The show came off as scheduled. I knocked out Therrian in three rounds, and flattened Aldrick in five. I was the happiest kid in the world. I had gained the feel of the ring, and had confidence in my own punching power.

(In tomorrow's Boston Evening American, Zachow tells how he attended New Hampshire University, quit college for boxing and battled his way to the front until he won the New England middleweight championship.)

KEARNS SAYS SCHMELING A QUITTER

By DAVIS WALSH

New York, Aug. 16 (INS)—The ugly word "quitter" was applied to Max Schmeling, the fighter today by Jack Kearns, the manager, by way of formal greetings and salutations upon the occasion of the former heavyweight champion's decision to accept Mr. Kearn's pugilist, a certain Mr. Walker, as an opponent here on September 19.

The match, of which the Milk Fund is to be beneficiary-in-chief, was officially closed yesterday in the midst of some random bickering between Mr. Kearns and Schmeling's Mr. Jacobs during which the former is alleged to have hinted darkly about Schmeling's "past."

KEARNS DENIES STATEMENT

In fact, he is supposed to have said something unpleasant about withdrawing or resigning or succumbing or maybe yielding under fire, but when I looked Mr. Kearns up this morning, he denied this utterly.

"That's a lie," said the gentleman. In fact," said he, "it's a dastardly outrage. I didn't say Schmeling would succumb. I said he'd quit cold the first good chance he got. He did it with Diekmann. He did it with Larry Gains and Gypsy Daniels. He did it that first time with Sharkey, and he'll do it again as soon as some man with real courage gets in there with him.

"The Dutchman can't take it. Worse than that, he won't take it. "I'm not trying to talk Walker up. It's easier to talk Schmeling down. He's no fighter and the sooner we find out about it the better for fighting in the heavyweight division."

20 PER CENT FOR WALKER

So on this note of gay raillery, the details of the gripping encounter were decided upon yesterday, these being, briefly, 35 per cent to Schmeling, 20 per cent to Walker. "15 rounds for the distance, September 19 for the time, the Garden Bowl for the place." Formal signing for the match is scheduled to take place on Thursday.

It will be Schmeling's first since that boisterous evening, two months ago, when he went in there with his championship, a sombre, slightly apprehensive man in a bathrobe, and came out with his health.

Many contended at the time that he was robbed, after thinking the matter over, I've decided that this simply could not have been. He still had the bathrobe.

Lefty O'Doul to Appear on Stage

By RINGSIDE

Nap Proulx, Taunton's middleweight gift to the ring, and Manny Davis, lethal hitting Houston schoolboy are headliners for the penny-a-round boxing show at Fenway Park tonight.

The engagement is in the nature of an elimination battle for the dubious pleasure of meeting the middleweight king, Ad Zachow at some future date.

Both Proulx and Davis are better than journeymen fighters. Proulx has made a creditable record against most of the middleweights in this section, and his last appearance here was marked by a sizzling fight with Zachow in which Proulx got one of the votes of the judges.

Davis, comparatively unknown in Boston, has a long and impressive record as a puncher. The Houston boy has knocked out Leo Larivee and Joe Delinsky.

A good preliminary program has been arranged. In addition to seven four-round battles there will be two six-round bouts, bringing Henry Surrette of Leominster against Jack Sigmore of Cambridge, and Grayson of Charlestown in action with Elmer Chase of New Bedford.

Ring Notes

The townsfolk of Dover, N. H., will stage a party for their newly crowned N. E. middleweight champion, 19-year-old Ad Zachow tomorrow night and a big assortment of local sporting followers and men around town will be seated in Simpson's Pavilion, wherever that might be, when they start passing out the victuals.

Young Zachow, who is handsome enough to fill a role for Clark Gable, is a very popular boy in his home town of Dover. Everyone likes the youngster and the reason is that he's so modest he won't even admit he's got a sting in his punch.

But there is very apt to be a hitch in the party procedure. The committee in charge had made plans to give Zachow the belt, emblematic of the N. E. middleweight championship. But Leo Larrivee, whom Zachow kayoed in two chukkers to win the title, refuses to give up the belt.

They've offered Leo a pair of suspenders and everything but still he is adamant on handing over his trophy. He says that he has defended the belt three times, that there is no more room for engraving upon it and that it is his for good. And that seems to be about all there is to it.

In the meanwhile Joe Scalponetti and many Italians are getting ready their autos for a crusade to Tiverton, R. I., on Thursday night. The reason is that Primo Carnera, who still is a big favorite with his countrymen, will be battling Jack Gagnon of Brighton in the feature bout at the Mark Stadium.

NEW PUNCHING SENSATION AND HIS ADVISERS

47 GOLFERS OF N. E. ENTERED IN TILT

Forty-seven New England amateurs and several from other sections of the country today began a 36-hole quest over the tricky Brae Burn Country Club course for the 12 places allotted this district in the qualifying round for the national amateur golf championship at Baltimore.

With the exception of Ed Kirouac, State amateur titlist, all low handicap players in the State were entered for the battle. Connecticut was represented by her champion, Bobby Grant, and by Charley Clare, recent winner of the New England crown.

OXNARD SEEKS BERTH

480 Amateurs Seek Qualifying Berths

New York, Aug. 16 (AP). Nearly 600 golfers sought places in the National amateur championship in a nation wide qualifying round played on 18 widely separated courses today.

Of the total of 569 players who would like to compete in the championship starting at Baltimore Sept. 12 only nine were granted exemption from the qualifying test. These included the defending champion Francis Ouimet, and members of the British Walker Cup team.

175 PLACES TO BE FILLED

The other 560 were to play 36 holes of medal competition today for one of the maximum of 175 places still remaining to be filled.

The entries and number of places to be filled in each district follow:

Boston, 48 entries and 12 places, New York, 100 and 27; Philadelphia, 77 and 20, Washington, 89 and 19, Atlanta, 17 and 5; Dallas, 9 and 4; Pittsburgh, 23 and 6, Cleveland, 39 and 10, Chicago, 42 and 14, St. Paul, 5 and 2; St. Louis, 7 and 2, Kansas City, 14 and 4; Denver, 16 and 4; Los Angeles, 11 and 4; San Francisco, 6 and 3; Portland, Ore., 15 and 5; Omaha, 6 and 2; Cincinnati, 25 and 7.

GASTANAGA'S FIGHTING POSE

This is the newest contender for heavyweight honors, Isadoro Gastanaga, who leaped to fame almost overnight when he knocked out Charley Retzlaff in one-round last week. It was the 24th one-round knockout for the Basque fighter. Hype Igoe, Boston Evening American's New York boxing expert, calls him a freckleless Bob Fitzsimmons, and says he has seldom seen a harder punch delivered than the one that put out Retzlaff. Hype, too, has seen such powerful hitters as Fitzsimmons, Ketchel, Langford, Dempsey and McCoy do their stuff.

RANDY MOORE BRAVES ACE IN HOLE

By RILEY GRANNON

It's a cinch to name the player most valuable to his club in the National League this year.

When Art Shires first was hurt the Tribe appeared in a very bad way. Berger was placed on the initial sack, which weakened the outfield and left a big hole in the outfield.

The team started to slump. But it wasn't long before Handy Randy rushed to first, permitting Berger to continue to center, and Shires' absence became scarcely noticeable.

Then Berger was injured. Yet thanks to Randy, who galloped to the garden, the club lost no ground while its home-run king was on the sidelines.

FINE THIRD BASEMAN

Following Berger's return, Moore went back to bench warming. His vacation was brief. First Schulmerich and then Shires, again, joined the hospital squad and Randy joined the regulars once more.

By this time, he had proved himself such a capable initial sacker and right fielder that McKechnie was on the verge of making him the steady guardian of one or the other of the berths when Fritz Knothe pulled up lame.

Nobody else being available for the hot corner, Handy Randy had to switch over there.

He lost no time in establishing himself as the best third sacker the club has had in years. He soon had to move back to first again however as the injured knee was slowing Shires down to a walk.

When Jordan came it looked like the bench for Randy for another spell. McKechnie had other ideas. He benched Knothe and promoted Randy to a regular third baseman.

And the Texan is still that and doing a great job around the difficult sack.

EQUIPOISE IS ON WAY MID-WEST

New York, Aug. 16 (INS). The fortunes of Cornelius V. Whitney's Equipoise will again be swung to the middle-west.

By his victory in the Whitney Stakes at Saratoga last Saturday in which he licked to a frazzle Morton L. Schwartz's American Derby and Arlington classic winner, Gusto, Equipoise firmly entrenched himself as the champion of champions of all denominations now in active campaigning and served notice that all future events are seemingly at his mercy.

Already the possessor of the Arlington gold cup, the Whitney color-bearer now aims to attach the coveted Hawthorne gold cup to his memoirs, besides filling it to the brim with gold doubloons.

POREDA TAKES ON TOWERING ALP TONIGHT

By HYPE IGOE

Newark, N. J., Aug. 16 (INS). Stanley Poreda, pride of Jersey City fight fans, will have on hand tonight the largest contract he has ever faced.

The conqueror of Ernie Schaaf meets Big Bootsie Carnera here in a 10-round bout, and it is a job.

Nobody in this country has succeeded in stopping Carnera. Hans Birkie, as hard a hitter as Poreda and Sharkey, couldn't spill Bootsie for keeps.

STYLE HURTS POREDA

Poreda's style may count against him tonight. He is essentially a stand-up fighter. He has never adopted any of the weaving or bobbing that may be necessary to thwart Big Primo.

Carnera [illegible] a terrifying spectacle in the ring. Whether he will make squares run down Poreda's spine is another thing entirely. Nobody is going to jump out of the dark and yell "Boo" loud enough to frighten Stanley P.

SECOND SECTION

THIS IS LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

THE SCOPE of the famous case of Seabury vs. Walker is widening. For the past year it has been in the public eye as the attempt of Samuel Seabury, acting as special investigator for the Hofstadter Committee, to discover proofs of corruption in the administration of the city of New York. The case came to a head with a personal duel, a battle of wits between investigator and mayor, when Mr. Walker went on the stand last May.

PROF. ROGERS

The evidence went up to Governor Roosevelt at Albany. According to the New York state constitution he has the power to remove certain elected officers. In the case of Sheriff Farley he exercised that right. So far as I know there was no question raised. But now the supporters of Mayor Walker have succeeded in getting the state courts to take cognizance of the so-called "home rule" contention. The mayor's party contend that the governor's authority to remove officials does not extend to certain elected municipal officers, notably the mayor.

Evils of Interlocking Rule

It is perfectly possible that the dispute may have to go straight up through the courts, to the Supreme Court and beyond. For in New York, by a curious freak of language, the Supreme Court is not the Supreme Court at all. Some observers have prophesied that the point might not be decided until after the election. However much Governor Roosevelt may feel like going ahead with his decision, a justice of the Apellate Division, who signed an order requiring the governor to show cause why he should not be prohibited from removing the mayor, has said that out of deference to the judicial branch the governor should not render a decision until the motion has been argued.

It is then no longer merely a question of whether Mayor Walker should be removed and what effect his removal or retention would have on Governor Roosevelt's political fortunes. It opens up the whole question of what is undoubtedly the [illegible] system, the interlocking responsibilities and [illegible] of municipal, county and state governments—not to forget the government at Washington.

The same difficulty exists in every state that contains a metropolis. There are those who contend that Chicago need not have gone bankrupt if it had not been subject to the rural legislators in Springfield. There was actually talk of secession, of erecting Cook County as a separate state to settle its own problems free from rural interference.

Planning experts are agreed that the island of Manhattan, the Jersey shore and the western parts of Long Island and Connecticut constitute an administrative area of which the political and economic interests are the same and are utterly different from those of upstate New York and inland New Jersey. Mayor Curley's plan for a metropolitan Boston recognizes the same [illegible]. The proper organization of the services of water supply, traffic control, and above all, public safety, transcends the existing political boundaries.

State Control in Boston

Our own Mrs. Tilton in her characteristically intemperate statement on Mr. Hoover's prohibition stand did state one unescapable truth. The prohibition question is largely a fight between the big city and the small town and rural hinterland. The question is whether the big city, which is the progressive agent of civilization, may go its own way or whether it is to be hobbled, gagged and hamstrung by the ideas of the rural hinterland which is just about half a century behind the age.

In Boston we have a state-controlled Finance Commission to keep an eye on municipal expenditures. The police commissioner of the city of Boston is appointed by the Governor. The financial arrangements of our cities are largely controlled by the legislatures.

Similarly, President Hoover admits that prohibition cannot be enforced in the states that do not wish to enforce it. At the same time he insists that if the states are to manage the liquor problem they must be subject always to a basic veto power resting in the federal government.

The American problem, it can be easily seen, is such a one as few countries possess. The German Republic, which is the inheritor of Bismarck's empire, is an artificial aggregation of states that divide sharply in respect to religion, economic interests, culture, and historical tradition. The Hitler regime may be successful in the north but that very success may alienate Bavaria and the south. Except for Germany, the other great countries, particularly England and France, are unified in culture and strongly centralized in government.

The sectional problem in America has always been a difficult one and that difficulty has been emphasized by our essentially artificial form of government. A sovereign nation composed of 48 sovereign states is an almost impossible proposition. A sovereign state made up of two disparate kinds of government, town and county, is almost as impossible, and a system of independent local government which make up a state government is equally impossible.

Turns Back to Home Rule

To within recent years an overwhelming logic, backed by the mass attraction of the greater unit upon the lesser, has tended to make the federal government supreme at the expense of the state and the state government supreme at the expense of the local community. However that process may seem unamerican, contrary to our oldest traditions, the process of centralization is a fact, a condition and not a theory.

It is interesting, therefore, to see that our most exciting problems of late years have depended on the old theory of states' rights and local home rule. The clock has turned back. The idea of states rights is finally settling the problem of the Eighteenth Amendment, and the problem of what shall be done with New York City seems to be finally turning on the philosophy of home rule. In other words, after over half a century in which the Hamiltonian theory has been supreme, it looks as if the Jeffersonian ideal is once more practical politics.

Such knowledge of history as I possess leads me to believe that the centrifugal theory of government, the theory of home rule, is a theory of disintegration. It is illogical and anomalous. People may be more free and more happy under it—though that is by no means certain—but it is doubtful whether their institutions will be as efficient, as secure, and as homogeneous. Conditions which have always existed in the matter of divorce should have been an example and a warning to those who believed in national prohibition. On the other hand a strong state government has without doubt tended to curb the incompetence and extravagance and corruption of our larger cities.

It is perfectly possible that we are in for an era of increasing home rule in municipalities and larger states rights. Such a condition will be in line with the oldest and most respected American tradition. Whether in our complex modern society such a theory can work out effectively only time can tell.

$100,000,000 BEER INDUSTRY FOR N. E.

BACK FROM STUDIES AT OXFORD

WIDE HUNT FOR NEWTON BOYS

Aid of police throughout the whole eastern section of the country was asked today to find two Newton boys, missing for one week. The boys are John Murphy, 11, of 198 River st., and Richard Thomas, 15, of 335 River st., West Newton.

They started by bicycle last Tuesday night with Richard Haley, 14, of River st., who returned Saturday.

They had blankets and pillows and made overnight stops at Auburndale, Cochituate, Framingham and Southboro and were to go to Worcester to sell their bicycles and hop a freight train.

The purpose of the trip, according to the Haley boy, was to see some adventure before returning to school in the fall.

MISS SHEEHAN KILLED IN AUTO

Police Inspector Timothy J. Sheehan, in charge of the automobile squad at police headquarters, received word today from an undertaker at Bishop's Crossing, Que., that his daughter, Katherine Sheehan, 19, was killed last night in an automobile accident.

Miss Sheehan was en route to Ste. Anne de Beaupre with her fiance, Joseph M. K. Condon, his mother, Mrs. M. K. Condon and his brother, James Condon.

Joseph Condon was at the wheel and swung his car to one side to avoid collision with an oncoming truck. It went into a ditch. The Condons were not hurt.

End of Dry Law Means Big Beer Industry for N. E.

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

With prohibition out of the way—

At a cost of more than $75,000,000.

Employing some 10,000 people.

With an investment of probably $25,000,000 more.

All within two years.

The above estimates were made to the Boston Evening American today by Joseph E. Doherty of Boston, owner of the Commercial Brewing Co., than whom no man is reputed to know more about the fiscal affairs of the brewing industry that was.

ONLY 3 READY TO START

He estimates that not more than three or four of the 75 breweries that existed in New England could start their faucets and vats full blast tomorrow if Volstead were scrapped and the manufacture of creamy ales and palatable beers allowed by law. These would be the Commercial in Charlestown, the Haffenreffer in Jamaica Plain and the Old Colony in Roxbury.

It might take [illegible] to a year to reopen the [illegible] owned by the Logan estate, the Star in Roxbury which [illegible] Murphy still holds with [illegible] patience; the Narragansett at Providence, in which Jacob Wirth of Boston has heavy holdings; the Houlihan Bros., at Lawrence; the Harvard, at Lowell, and the Worcester Brewing Co., at Worcester which made a fortune for the late and genial Michael J. Finnegan.

MEANS 50 NEW PLANTS

"The point is," said Mr. Doherty, "that the famous brewing industry of New England has naturally been allowed to disintegrate in the 14 years of its idleness under the Volstead law.

"The great Reuter brewery of Sterling ale has gone to junk. The famous Frank Jones and other New Hampshire breweries realized they could not reopen until state as well as national prohibition was repealed. In short, there are not more than a dozen breweries in New England which have been kept in partial shape for the purpose for which they were created.

"A new brewing structure will have to be erected for this section of the country, and this will require a capital investment of at least $75,000,000 for 50 average-sized breweries of 200,000-barrel capacity per year. The Jones and Reuter establishments were ventures of from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 each."

"Will there be a demand for this business investment?" Mr. Doherty was asked.

WOULD AVOID POISON BEER

"Demand for it?" he exclaimed. "The Commercial and the Haffenreffer are the only breweries in New England permitted by the government to manufacture legal beer at this time, and they are not supplying one-fortieth of one per cent of the beer consumed in this section of the country.

"My plant," he said, "would pay the national government about $1,000,000 a year in the revenue tax. This does not include the real estate and other forms of taxes, and I do not regard the Commercial as a big plant."

MOTORSHIP IN FROM HAMBURG

With a large number of returning vacationists, the Hamburg-American Line motorship Milwaukee docked at Commonwealth Pier today from Hamburg and Queenstown.

George R. Farnum, former assistant U. S. Attorney General, with Mrs. Farnum, returned after a tour through the Far East. Farnum is now honorary consul for Turkey and makes his home in Chestnut st., Beacon Hill.

Daniel J. Harkins, Boston agent of the line, was also aboard, with Mrs. Harkins and their son, Daniel D. Harkins, 4. Harkins was on a vacation trip of six weeks, during which he visited the main offices at Hamburg.

Theresa Kittredge of Clinton returned from Oxford, Eng., where she studied in a summer course for American women teachers.

Also aboard were Mrs. Joel Hathaway, wife of a Newton school committeeman, and her daughter, Elizabeth Hatheway, 4. Mother and daughter made a trip to Dresden, Germany, five months ago.

WALTHAM CRASH INJURES THREE

James J. Gauthier, 48, Mrs. Thelma Gauthier, 21, his daughter-in-law, and Mrs. Rose Sprague, 49, all of Chestnut st., Waltham, were injured today when their automobile struck a post and tree at River and Lexington sts., West Newton.

Gauthier, who was pinned under the overturned car, suffered fracture of three ribs and possible internal injuries. Mrs. Gauthier and Mrs. Sprague were cut and bruised.

Police said one of two men who fled from the scene was driving the car. They said the machine was registered to a Main st., Waltham, man, for whom they were looking to explain the presence of liquor.

SLIGHT GAIN BY PETERS' SON

Although completely paralyzed, a "slight but substantial gain" was reported today at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, in the condition of John Peters, 17, son of former Mayor Andrew J. Peters.

The boy was stricken with infantile paralysis last week at Rockland, Me., and was rushed to Boston on Saturday by airplane, and immediately placedin the Drinker respirator.

He was visited today by his father, who told reporters the boy received a soaking early last week while in a sailboat race off Rockland, and caught cold. On Friday he suffered a chill and his condition rapidly developed paralysis.

3 GUNMEN ROB MEDFORD STORE

Three young bandits, each with a gun, held up the store at 88 Spring st., Medford, shortly before noon today and escaped with about $50. They parked a blue sedan in front of the store which they entered with guns drawn.

One kept the manager, Albert Munn, of Pinket st., Medford, who was alone, covered in the back room, while the other pair scooped the contents from two cash registers. Each was about 21 years old, Munn told police.

Man Suicide in Home

Brockton, Aug. 16—Carl M. Berquist, 58, of Winthrop st., committed suicide by taking illuminating gas in his home, according to the finding of Medical Examiner Fullerton.

BIRTH MAKES 5 GENERATIONS

A baby daughter born in Melrose Hospital last night to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Obern of North Reading should by all the signs grow up to be a model child, for she will have seven direct ancestors in the vicinity to keep her in the right path.

Besides the usual ration of parents, she will have two grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Nason of Malden. If she is too much for them, two great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Nason of Stevens st., Malden, can take a hand.

And if she still persists in using lipstick and wearing a sun tan bathing suit, her great-great grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Peach, also of Stevens st., can give her some pointers from the experience of 94 years.

BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES

From Which M-G-M Has Made a Glamorous Picture Starring Marion Davies

—By—
Frances Marion

Larry Has Surprise Waiting for Him

"Go away . . ."

"All right—see where you'll land——"

"You'll see where I'll land!" said Blondie, as though suddenly making up her mind. "Heigh, baby!" she called to Pratt. He approached, smiling broadly.

"I thought you'd jumped overboard . . ."

"Would you jump after me if I did?"

"Would I . . ."

Blondie turned and ran full speed down the deck.

"Hey!" called Pratt, as he started after her.

As Blondie reached the low couch at the stern of the boat she dived laughingly into the bank of pillows. As Pratt reached the couch on the run he fell down beside Blondie.

"Lurline, precious . . ." It was one of the Follies' pony girls. ". . . where did you find the charming little creature? . . . So blonde! . . . so cute! . . . so energetic!"

POSED DAILY

If not thorough, the education offered by the Follies to its students is at least acquired quickly. From the moment she took her first dancing lesson, Blondie absorbed the life of the show girl like a sponge. Always good looking, she became beautiful in the new environment. And her captivating personality made her the center of attraction in the gay life of the theatrical world.

It was no time at all until her pictures graced the pages of every magazine, and she posed daily for pictures needed by newspapers for their rotogravure sections. But the climax of all her publicity came when she was named in the divorce suit of Mrs. Mortimer Pratt. Immediately after that story was broadcast throughout the country, Blondie McClune of the Follies became the scandal readers' queen. Her popularity increased when they made the most of the fact that she came from the tenement district, and worked behind the odds and ends counter of a cheap department store, to grace the Broadway Follies. Everything she did and every word she said was printed widely and read avidly.

Blondie herself went through it all with an acquired grace. She made the best of every situation, neither losing her sense of balance nor her good humor. Her penthouse was beautiful and in good taste, she rode to the theater in her own Rolls-Royce and her parties were the talk of the town.

But today there was a sense of uncertainty about Blondie as she walked into her luxurious drawing room, adjusting a huge pearl earring. Blondie was stunning in black velvet lounging pajamas as she joined the Locke Twins, those two dancing boys who had set Paris wild and were now making America dance-team-conscious.

"Pearls for tears," said Paul, as he handed her a glass of champagne.

"They're nice," said Albert. "Who's coming?"

"I thought you weren't speaking."

"We're not."

LURLINE GOES WILD

"She was with a new Butter-and-Eggs the other day at the Lido," chimed in Albert. "They say she has hocked most of her jewels."

"You must go, now," said Blondie, irritably.

"Shall we see you later?" they chorused.

"Maybe!" and Blondie rang for the maid.

"Something very special on?" asked Albert.

"Run along!" said Blondie.

"We'll call you later," they shouted as they went out.

The maid entered. Blondie turned to her and with quiet dignity ordered: "Some tea and toast—very nice—some champagne ready in case of an emergency. Send Andre

Just That

You're not a bit good-looking,
You have no motor car,
You never buy me diamonds,
Or feed me caviar.

You're certainly no Adonis,
You have no grand physique,
What then, is the attraction
When I could have a sheik?

I will confess my reason,
Now please don't think it queer,
I love the way you whisper
"You're beautiful, my dear!"

Gossip Gabbing:

'Tis reported that Officer Tommy Morrow of Brookline will be secretly One-and-Onlyed to that sweet Brown girl of Brookline on Sept. 18—just before he goes on his vacation—and they'll return after the honeymoon to live in Brown st . . . Is it true that Squantum's Dorothy Mayer and barrister Larry McHugh will be gold-banded before the end of the year, followed by Europe trekking and if it's so what about that torch-carrying N. Yorker? . . . Charlestown's dance marvel, Ethel St. Claire, back in town for a few days' rest, rushed right out to Worcester's Sterling Country Club and back to foot-tapping again . . . She has a Fifi D'Orsay haircut and three bank books—not empty ones either! . . . Eleanore Talcott, aristocrat of the air-lanes is trilling bird-like at the Bowdoin Square theater this week . . . Lowe Given Mayor Role in Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 16—I don't know that I can wax enthusiastic over a film version of Stephen Endicott's novel, "Mayor Harding of New York." I thought when I read the book that it was a decidedly unfriendly gesture toward Mayor Jimmy Walker.

• • •

Edward Small has purchased the screen rights for Reliance pictures, in spite of all that has been said "agin" it, and will film the story with Edmund Lowe in the chief role.

Louella O. Parsons

Mr. Small's reason for taking this arbitrary step is plain enough. With all the fireworks at Albany he feels it is timely. Even so, he is going to find that many of Jimmy's friends will resent such a picture.

"Mayor Harding of New York" is Edmund Lowe's first of a series of six which he has contracted to make for Reliance.

Honeymooners Returning

Our very newest bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. George Brent, leave New York today for home. Work must go on, even when it interrupts a honeymoon, and besides Ruth Chatterton's public is waiting to see her as Mrs. Brent. When she reaches here she will be asked by Darryl Zanuck to read "The Paris Racket," a story which ran in the American Mercury. If Lady Ruth likes the story it is her next. Also George Brent's next. More than likely the team of Chatterton and Brent will remain intact.

• • •

A Line or Two

A new face at the Paramount studios is that of Henry Hobart. Imagine making a remark like that about Henry Hobart who has been in pictures longer than almost anyone in Hollywood. He has joined the studios as producer. Percy Heath, formerly in charge of the writing staff, has been promoted and you may now address him as assistant producer instead of writer. It has been many a day since we have written about Jeanette Loff and the movies. Jeanette has just put her name on a contract to play the lead in Sol Lesser's production, "Tarzan, the Fearless."

• • •

Chatter in Hollywood

Marriage, like murder, will leak out. Blanche Mehaffey, erstwhile motion picture actress, has been the bride of Ralph Like for three whole weeks. Mr. Like, in case you are interested in this particular bridegroom, is an independent producer, well known in motion pictures. He and Miss Mehaffey promised to love and obey in Agua Caliente and they are honeymooning aboard a yacht.

Lew's Strategy

Where is Lew Ayres at this moment? Miles and miles away on a boat. I shouldn't like to say Lew took to the blue waters because he didn't want to play a supporting role in a Fox picture, but it looks very much as if that has something to do with the case. "Okay America" gives Mr. Ayres little boy his best role since "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Doorway to Hell." After a succession of mediocre pictures here is one that is a knockout. Lew wants to continue being head man, so when he had an inkling that he was being paged for a supporting role in [illegible] "State Fair" opposite Janet Gaynor, he took himself away from the city. Not that he doesn't appreciate Miss Gaynor's [illegible] but he doesn't care to play second fiddle.

Lew Ayres

Gary Offered Role

If Mary Pickford cannot borrow Gary Cooper for the lead in "Unhappy Ending" (tentative title) she is going to be that disappointed. Mary has set her heart on getting Gary for this part, which is just meant for him. She has sent an urgent request to Paramount for the loan of their popular male favorite but so far no promises have been forthcoming. Gary is eager to play the part but Paramount feels it will tax his strength too much.

LOLA LANE wearing a sun shade silk dress with hat to match in her role as a bridesmaid at the JEAN CARMEN-WALTER LOHMAN wedding. CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER matron of honor in brown and white with corresponding hat. The bride a very pretty little blonde, under contract to Universal, returns from her honeymoon tomorrow morning to begin work in a picture. CARL LAEMMLE, JR., in a heavy game of tennis at Malibu Sunday. ANNA MAY WONG, Oriental screen beauty, due to return to Hollywood. She is considering a stage engagement in Honolulu. CARL LAEMMLE SR. entertaining ARTHUR BRISBANE and AMELIA EARHART all in one day. UNCLE CARL was a regular attendant at the Olympic games. AUSTIN PARKER plans to finish a novel he has started as soon as he completes the scenario he is writing for Paramount. AUSTIN continues to take MIRIAM HOPKINS places. That's all today.

A WINSOME DANCER IN ORPHEUM REVUE

Film 'Doubles' at Scollay

By HARRIS MORGAN

At the Scollay this week is an exceptional stage attraction, called "Hollywood on Parade," a smart revue that contains the "doubles" of a score of Hollywood's more famous [illegible] from Garbo to Velez. The likeness of these "doubles" to the stars they represent is striking. "James Cagney," "Buster Keaton," "Jean Harlow," "Pola Negri," [illegible] "Carroll," "Lupe Velez" and Garbo" are some of the features. Arthur Harley, long famous in vaudeville, deserves great credit for the way that he presents the talent of these performers.

Clark and Verdi, Italian comedians, stop the show and would be headliners on the average vaudeville bill. Nate Busby, blackface comedian, and company offer "Christmas at the Big House," a very good comedy skit. Hoffman and Lambert do [illegible] juggling with "The Round-Up of Steps" completing the bill.

The feature picture is "Guilty as Hell," with Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen as a wise-cracking reporter and a dumb detective who waste time fighting over "dames" while an innocent man is about to hang for murder.

Mexico Bared on Screen

Alicia Ortiz

There is naught synthetic or "stagey" about this production. It marks of the soil and the people has the freshness of genuineness of landscape and people and sincere treatment, and withal is a delightful film.

There's a story, neatly interwoven and finely acted by a good cast topped by Donald Reed and Alicia Ortiz. The theme is interwoven with real life mountains and valleys, towns in repose and in fiesta garb, natives as they are, give a rich touch to the dramatic threads. The lenses, by day and by night, pick out the fertile panorama, the cameras swing and swerve and thrill by the sheer beauty of what they often portray.

Thus, in addition to romance one gets an inner sight into Mexicans and their Mexico, the first time so intimate a picture of that country has come to view.

"Flame of Mexico" was produced by Mrs. Juliet Barrett Rublee, an American, living for years in Mexico.

New Gayety Cuts Its Prices; Quality Show

The New Gayety this week scales its prices downward. Manager Grover C. Burkhardt announces 1000 seats at 15 cents each, with evening prices at 25 cents and 15 cents. Despite the lower prices there will be no change in the policy of giving two feature pictures and vaudeville. Now at the New Gayety are Edmund Lowe, Evelyn Brent and Constance Cummings in "Attorney for the Defense," and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "It's Tough to be Famous," together with five acts of vaudeville.

W. H. Raynor Predicts Great Year for Films and Variety Stars

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Bigger and better shows, and meshing theater gears more closely into community activities, are among the features on the working program which William H. Raynor sets ahead of himself. Mr. Raynor, being a newcomer in our midst, must now be introduced. He has just assumed control of all the RKO interests in this section, as divisional director for New England.

• • •

RKO has sent him here as a sort of prosperity engineer and business builder. Co-operation he tells us during a talk with him in his office at Keith's is a keynote to his method of procedure. His own career has been a series of success through 24 years in show business in the field of operation. He comes to Boston direct from Detroit, where he headed the Middle West division of the Fox theater circuit. On that job his achievement won him national attention; and that is why Harold B. Franklin, president of RKO, lured him into that organization.

Wm. H. Raynor

"President Franklin had signed contracts with all the available stars and acts of front rank before he initiated our present 'Greater Show Season,'" Mr. Raynor informs us. "People in the business know he is not only the [illegible] in the theater business, but always delivers the goods. So I can assure you that our houses will put out the best shows, on both stage and screen.

"Vaudeville is coming back stronger all the time. Our bills, now so popular, here and elsewhere, prove their appeal to patrons by packing folks into our theaters. I don't have to talk about local success of our shows, for the business Keith's and the Boston are doing, is now a matter of record.

"Overnight the talent bursts forth for variety. Martin Beck, leader in building up vaudeville, and now with RKO, is continually developing new talent. The shows you are now seeing are proofs of his genius."

Mr. Raynor [illegible] a valuable asset for the development and training of stars for the variety stage.

"Both films and vaudeville have got to make good this year," he continues. "From what I see, both will make good. It's going to be a good year. In vaudeville we have restored the confidence of the actor, and that was a most important item. He had gone through his worst years; now he has backing and bookings. And he is putting out his best effort. His feet are on the ground—hence he can entertain in a wholehearted way.

"New England is opportunity's own field. Incidentally, as you know, this is a bang-up fine showtown, one of the best in the country. New Englanders and that means Bostonians, of course, want the best—they'll patronize the houses showing the best."

Mr. R[illegible] his New England theaters in the closest possible way with worthy community causes, and that will be a major item on his own program for RKO.

"In the matter of pictures we have signed up for the entire Columbia product for the year, and that is a tremendous asset. It gives us now the product of three outstanding companies, our own Radio pictures, Columbia, and Universal, in addition to choices from other Hollywood studios."

Mr. Raynor [illegible] and in ability is possessed of striking personality and is delightfully frank and direct in [illegible].

Mrs. Raynor accompanied him to Boston, and they will live in [illegible].

Summer Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THERE IS A CHARMING YOUNG MATRON SPENDING the summer with her father-in-law, Mr. Louis K. Liggett at Manomet, whose manner of wearing her delightful clothes is very pleasing. Mrs. Leigh Liggett with her golden hair and her nice smile, has been seen looking enchantingly this summer in a sky blue silk afternoon dress with hemstitched work and a rose-petal broad brimmed hat that droops becomingly; and we do think this pink and blue combination very fetching! It reminds one of the wild roses and forget-me-nots, and that's ever so pretty.

Well, speaking of charmers, Miss Nancy Whitman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hendricks Whitman, who is an attractive member of the North Shore younger set, has the erst-while ditty suggested "That Certain Thing." She looks delightful in a red and white striped, rather white with a fine little stripe of red, sport dress with one of the quasi-masculine collars. It would have to be quasi on Miss Whitman because she is essentially feminine. She wears a large picture hat with wee little flowers in the front, and very winsome she is. Have you noticed that she has a flowery-smile, if you know what I mean.

* * *

A Dainty Manchester Miss

NOW REALLY HERE IS SOME ONE PRETTY SPECIAL! Have you seen her with a merry smile that everyone loves to see, her light blue silk sports dress with no sleeves but a nice tidy little waist-line and a broad-brimmed shade hat of white straw trimmed with blue? It's Miss Barbara Putnam you know of Manchester, a very charming and delightful young person, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Putnam. She wears ankle socks and sport shoes; well, of course, not for evening wear, then she has those dainty little high-heeled affairs that go so well with her attractive evening gowns.

* * *

And since we are on the subject of fair ladies, have you noticed Miss Alice Burrage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Burrage of the North Shore. Of course you have seen her many a time—She's lovely in evening dress, especially white satin that fits her slender figure beautifully, but she is also charming in her pink sport frock with short sleeves and a V-neck. She wears the stylish open sandal shoe with a little heel which gives just that touch of charm that allures.

* * *

Pink Ensemble

THEN ANOTHER YOUNG LADY that is always worthy of note is Miss Eleanor Swift, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Swift of Beacon st., Boston. She is slender and looks altogether delightful in her pink ensemble with a little short coatee and a chic little narrow brimmed hat of pink with tiny flowers on the side. She wears the attractive open worked sandal which looks so pretty on neat little feet and attractive ankles, as are those of Miss Barbara Swift.

* * *

AND REALLY SPEAKING of charm how about that fair lady spending her summer at Newport and returning to New York for the gay social season there, Miss Rose Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Davis. Miss Davis has been seen at many gay social functions looking altogether charming and delightful. She is especially fetching in her peach colored afternoon frock with a square neck and little cape sleeves, a pleated skirt that comes well nigh to her dainty ankles, and then the merry little open sandal shoes. No wonder everyone loves them, those little shoes, they are so comfortable and they look most attractive.

* * *

Broad Brim

SOMETIMES THE FLESH-colored stocking shows through and occasionally one strains the eye (trying to be casual, you know) to see whether it is the "flesh" of the "flesh color" that peeks through. But to continue on our fascinating subject, Miss Davis tops her charming costume off with a coyly-tilted broad-brimmed hat, and then, just to remind us that her name is Rose, she wears a fresh pink rose on her shoulder—altogether delightful we would say.

* * *

MRS. HUGH BANCROFT OF Cohasset is looking remarkably well this summer. She is very busy just now, of course, with the myriad plans in connection with the Cohasset Horse Show, which in reality is the Bancroft Shwo. The show is to be held on the Bancroft grounds and many of the entries are Bancroft horses. Mrs. Bancroft for years has been interested in this event and lent her assistance.

* * *

A Delightful Hostess

MRS. BANCROFT LOOKS especially well in her white ensemble, trimmed with the patriotic colors that are being worn so much this season. Mrs. Bancroft is always a delightful hostess and her guests are always exquisitely entertained. Of course such talent of a hostess makes each year a great success of the great social event, the Cohasset Horse Show.

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

A man who has not done his duty has missed a human experience. I tried to avoid it for years until an older friend upbraided me for my lack of civic spirit and added that the humor of the jury room would probably give me a great deal of pleasure.

So the next time I received one of those little slips bidding me report at a certain courthouse instead of pleading that I was far too busy to serve, or saying that I was about to leave on an extended trip, as so many citizens do, I got into line at 9.30 in the morning, wasted an hour until the clerk called our names at 10.30, and surprised him very much, I have no doubt, by saying that I was eager to get into the jury box.

Indeed, I surprised him so much that he eyed me suspiciously, and wondered, probably, if I had some ulterior motive in thus taking on what is always considered an unpleasant duty. He might have had the notion that I was interested in the verdict in a certain case about to be called; but when I was examined I made it clear that I was unacquainted with either the defendant or the plaintiff and knew none of the lawyers on either side.

* * *

I was accepted, and felt rather important when I found myself the foreman of the jury. At last I was doing what every decent citizen should do; but I must say that one becomes discouraged over court procedure, "the law's delays," the unbelievable loss of time in handling the most simple cases.

Often it takes two or three days to select 12 men, and the same questions and answers, repeated interminably, get on one's nerves. And the judge usually comes in quite late, so that frequently it is 11 o'clock before court open.

The best part of the day has vanished and as there is an hour's intermission for lunch and the afternoon session is done by after 4 o'clock, it can be seen how little time is actually spent in court.

Many business men consider all this a frightful waste, and as they have to go to their offices to attend to their work during any intermission, no matter how short, they object to the lack of consideration shown them. That is one good reason why so many citizens will move heaven and earth to be excused.

* * *

In this particular case on which I found myself I was to meet a stubborn fellow juror—the kind one has read about but has never quite believed in. He has seemed more like a character in fiction than a living breathing individual.

It was a simple case. A dressmaker was suing a husband for his wife's bill; and as all husbands are legally responsible for such contracts made in good faith, the judge practically charged us to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff.

We went into the jury room at 4 in the afternoon, and I expected we should be there for a matter of five minutes. I happened to have a dinner engagement that evening and was going to the theater with some friends. I was elated to think that I could also get uptown and attend to some editorial work, and then go home in plenty of time to dress and get to my party.

* * *

We took a first vote; and eleven of us raised our hands. Number 12 sat in a corner, a look of amazement on his placid face. I was surprised, for I had noted him from the beginning of the trial and thought him an exceptionally intelligent looking fellow. That he should be the one not to agree with us filled me with nothing short of displeasure.

We took a second vote. He still held out, rather morosely this time. Then we fell to discussing the simple case. It was obvious, I said, that the plaintiff should receive a verdict; could he not understand that?

Others in the room, as the slow hours dragged by, were not as patient as I. Some swore and stamped their feet and gathered in hostile groups about the man whom by this time we considered a stupid jackass. Fists were shaken in his face, others glanced at their watches, for we were all anxious to get away. Still he was adamant.

* * *

Back again to the dim courthouse, up those empty stairs, locked once more in that barren room. More arguments. More lifted voices. And still we could not move this man.

Finally, at 10 o'clock, I went over into a corner with the fellow and quietly said: "Sir, can't you see that Miss Blank should receive this verdict?"

'Miss Blank?" he cried. "Is she the plaintiff? I thought all along that she was what they call the defendant!"

One hardly knew whether to embrace him or to kick him. He had been with us all along, but knew nothing of the nomenclature of courtrooms.

Yes, jury duty is fun—if you have the time for it.

By MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

PLENTY OF POOR BOYS in the United States—as well as the devoted mothers who are unhappy because their sons must endure scrimping and self-denial—should read some recent remarks by R[illegible] Reynolds and take heart.

NO WORSE FATE

If there [illegible] or g[illegible] is a fate [illegible] to a life [illegible] ambition, [illegible] hope, without dreams.

To have everything is worse than to have nothing, though that last state is bad enough. No one should extenuate or underestimate the sufferings of the children of the poor, their deprivation of opportunity, of schooling, even of food and clothes. But they at least are not deprived of the determination to achieve.

While the rest of us must not fool ourselves with the idea that we have no obligation to make a better life for them, [illegible] we can recognize [illegible] grow [illegible] a better life for them [illegible] little [illegible] en spoon [illegible] out the incentive to do anything but [illegible]

Even more th[illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] we admire John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for his iron determination that his boys should be kept as long as possible from the knowledge that they are the children and grandchildren of two of the world's richest men. Perhaps you have heard the story of how, when the youngsters were spending a Summer on the Maine coast, they expressed to the owner of a small motor boat their wistful admiration and envy.

"Why don't you ask your father to buy you one?" the man naturally inquired.

"Say, who do you think we are—the Vanderbilts?" was the swift response of the innocent heirs of Standard Oil's multi-millions.

Smith Reynolds grew up in no such naïve ignorance of his family's fortunes.

THE REAL TRAGEDY

He seems to have been, in many ways, a lovable, promising young man. Nancy Hoyt, the gifted novelist who has just revealed herself as one of the women who loved him, speaks tenderly of his chivalry and trustworthiness. His brother Richard says:

"He would have made a fine navy officer. He possessed courage and he was interested in navigation and aviation."

Whatever he might have been or done was lost and destroyed under an avalanche of gold, under the "curse of money" against which Libby Holman Reynolds cried out savagely in her story told at the inquest. He didn't have to work—that was his real tragedy.

Shall She Go Out With Petter?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've been asked to go for a ride by a boy I've known for a long time, but who has a reputation of being a great petter, and if there's anything I dislike thoroughly it's that sort of promiscuous mauling. I must say he's always shown me a great deal of respect, and when he takes me home from a party and asks for a good night kiss he just doesn't get it. If a boy takes me out and wants to know where "he gets off," he's never in doubt after I tell him. Some people laugh at me and say I'm destined to be an old maid. No, indeed, Miss Fairfax; but I want my life to be sweet and clean, so some day I can give my real love to the man of my choice. Meantime, shall I go out with the petter?

F. T.

Dear B. T.: As the petter has always treated you with respect and hasn't even been rewarded with that goodnight kiss, and knows how you feel about promiscuous love-making, it might be safe to go with him on what might be called a trial trip. Usually boys do not attempt to pet unless they feel reasonably confident that there will be little or no objection.

He Wants to Take to the Road

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Like many another I lost my job during the past year and my wife's family agreed to let us live with them for a minimum rate. We had a thousand dollars saved, but our baby was born and died and that didn't leave much of the nest egg. I've left no stone unturned to find a job but have been unsuccessful. My wife's family are rotten to me, gazing at me at table and making sarcastic remarks about the boarders. We pay nothing now as we have nothing. I want to take to the road. I have a brother who has an onion ranch in Texas. He's not doing very well, but I believe he'd take me on for board and shelter till the tide turns. My wife doesn't want me to go, as she says I [illegible] return [illegible] undertake [illegible] trek to Texas. I've not written to my brother fearing he would discourage me if I asked to come, but feeling he wouldn't turn me down if I appeared at his door.

I love my wife devotedly and I think I would be able to send for her. What do you make of my case? I don't know much about tramping, having been a bookkeeper all my adult life.

SAM A. H.

Dear Sam: I'm inclined to agree with your wife that it would be pretty hard on a man who has had no experience on the road to begin now, when there are so many homeless people who are trying the same venture. Don't you think it would be better to write to your brother and enlist his help?

Mid-Summer Fashionable Straw Hat

JUST IN TIME for the mid-summer season is the large capeline hat of straw with a fabric crown. One grand model has a huge brim of red Milan straw and a crown of black and white dotted satin. A high trimming of the fabric is caught by a horseshoe of brilliants.

ONCE AGAIN delicate draperies mark many of the newest evening frocks. A lovely model done in a very sheer georgette has a skirt with fluttery drapery. A [illegible] cape, its edge embroidered with silver sequins, [illegible] a deep back decolletage and repeats the line of the skirt drapery. The color is [illegible] pink.

ROUGH TREATMENT is being accorded crepe this year not only for clothes for day wear but for evening clothes. A new model is done in rough white crepe, and for contrast black cire satin ribbon is used. The ribbon makes rippled shoulder crests, and is used also for a sash, with a broad butterfly bow in back.

A CHEERFUL SOUND is that of rustling taffeta, again in demand. A nice evening ensemble is a black taffeta frock cut on princess lines and having self-ruchings for shoulder straps, with waist-length cape of the same material bordered in silver fox.

IT WILL CATCH on here as it did in Paris—that idea of matching earrings with hat trimming. For instance, with a black fabric hat trimmed with a feather fancy developed in a real rock crystal. The same idea is worked out in jade and other semi-precious stones.

SKETCHED IN PARIS

Daily True Story

A Bird in the Hand

WHEN EDNA FARRELL came to New York and got herself a tryout in the chorus of "Heigho, Baby Mine," the first thing she did was to change her name to Muriel St. Clair. And in justice to her it must be said that the new nomenclature suited her style of beauty.

Muriel was a perfect [illegible] with a [illegible] keen [illegible] beauty [illegible] she resolved never to marry unless the proposing gentleman had mines and [illegible] of [illegible]

In this [illegible] n fen [illegible]

But Hazel was not jealous. "You go ahead," she advised, "and when you meet one of these rich young guys with more cash than brains, snap him up."

"I get you," said Muriel, "but this boy that's running around after me now—I can't make him out—he looks as though he ought to have a million, but he never spends anything."

ANOTHER WARNING

[illegible]

"Well, it won't hurt you," said Hazel, "as I said if I hadn't been fooled once I'd say give him the glass eye, but you can't be sure of anything in this world."

[illegible]

THE REAL POINT

[illegible]

"What I'm coming to," he said at last, "is this—I've got a little money I'm going to inherit in about a year or so and I thought if you could manage so can enough we might be married now."

"Oh," cried Muriel with the proper astonishment, "but what would we live on?"

"It doesn't take much for two people to live these days," Hugh explained. "I've got a little shack in the country—out Tuxedo way where we could be perfectly happy."

"But my dear," she said, "exactly what do you mean—of course I'm flattered that you ask me to marry you—but—but [illegible]"

"Don't let that worry you," said Hugh, taking one of her hands and speaking in a low voice so that the other occupants of the bench might not share his secret. "I've got a couple of hundred a month and there'll be more later."

"Oh, that's wonderful," said Muriel, "but I couldn't let you throw yourself away on me—no, I really couldn't. I like you, yes I do, a lot, but I couldn't do that. It isn't the money—I've got my career, you see."

"I see," said Hugh, "and you wouldn't give that up to live in the country. I suppose I'm selfish to ask, but somehow I felt you'd care for that sort of thing. I'm awfully sorry."

She didn't see Hugh again and then, unexpectedly, the show closed and Muriel was minus a job. Hazel was in the doldrums. "I guess there's nothing for me to do but to beat it back to the old home on the farm. I'll be sure of enough to eat there, anyhow. This is a tough town when you're broke—and that reminds me, you lucky bum, I found out about that kid that's been making eyes at you. He's going to drop into a million about a year from now and more later, so I don't feel so sorry for you."

"Say," she asked, "are you one of the fools? Did you let him get away?"

"Maybe it isn't too late," said Muriel desperately. "He told me all [illegible] I was [illegible] couple of hundred [illegible] of marrying anyone [illegible]

[illegible] "He asked [illegible] isn't too late [illegible]"

"But I don't know how to get him," said Muriel.

"I do," said Hazel. "Billy Denton gave me all the dope on him." She extracted a slip of paper from her bag and called off a number.

"I'll go down to the drug store while you phone," she said. "Come on."

[illegible] Hazel [illegible]

"Well," queried Muriel, "what you so white about?"

"He sailed—gone round the world for a year!" gasped Muriel. "My God, of all the hard luck!"

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Beneath the Stars

White lights and laughter, heat and song,
The rhythm of the dance,
The movement of the restless throng
And then the sky's expanse!

To leave it all—the violins,
The dazzle and the glare—
Before the morn's first glow begins
To seek the sweet, fresh air!

Down garden ways so still, so cool,
To wander through the night,
To watch pale lilies in the pool
And fireflies' fitful light!

To leave the music and the mirth
Which vague unrest still mars,
To tread the green and kindly Earth
Beneath the tranquil stars!

They drop away, the care and grief,
Forgotten, drifted far,
While, beautiful beyond belief,
Life beckons like a star!

Egg Shampoos Should Foam Up Well

NO USE using eggs for a shampoo unless there are enough of them to foam up well and to be distributed generously all over the head. Six or seven eggs are necessary even for short hair. Use three beaten slightly, rinse with warm water, use the rest and rinse again. If particles of the egg adhere to hair after all, don't worry. The brush will remove them.

TRAVEL LIGHT on the motor trip but don't fail to take along a bottle of liquid cleanser, a creamy cosmetic that goes on easily, that brings away the dust of travel that is removed in a jiffy with cleansing tissues. Road dust is hard on any complexion, kicks up an irritation, doesn't give way before soap and water as it does before an oily preparation. Talcum powder patted into the skin during the journey is refreshing, protects against the ravages of strong winds and flaring sunlight.

FOR HOUSEWORK, walking and sports, the heel of the shoe should lift the body one inch and one-fourth. Chiropodists claim that if this heel is worn during the day a woman can indulge in moderately high heels during evening festivities with no bad effects on posture or figure. The heel to avoid is the one with a small base that doesn't provide a foothold, allowing the ankle to turn and sway, causing tension of the muscles of ankle and leg, throwing the body out of balance.

PEACOCK BLUE and blue green mascaro are used now on eye lashes, usually when the same shades are applied to eyelids. Girls who like to speed ahead of the everyday beauty parade are letting up on vivid lip sticks, concentrating on eye effects. Some results are charming and exotic, others not so good. But that's the way with beauty fads. Clever women seize upon them, benefit by them; less clever ones abuse them.

A MILD BLEACH: FOUR ounces of rubbing alcohol, two ounces of stronger rosewater, 15 drops of simple tincture of benzoin. Apply with cotton every night and let dry on.

The Marry-Go-Round

The New "Househusband"

By HELEN ROWLAND

IT TOOK QUITE a few years and a lot of op[illegible] men see that the [illegible] marriage [illegible] as well as [illegible] and that the [illegible] husband as a helpmate.

• • •

shock for a new idea to bore its way into the non-reliable masculine mind. But now lots of young husbands are cheerfully and unblushingly wiping the dishes and helping to mix the dough for the little woman who has been down town all day helping to make it.

• • •

RECIPROCITY [illegible] And now a tired business [illegible] that since she took a job her husband just [illegible] the kitchen and wears him [illegible] out giving her ADVICE on how to do things!

• • •

Well, what did she expect? That's the old-fashioned man's idea of "helping with the housework." Standing around with a newspaper in one hand and a pipe in the other and contributing all the "advice," while the wife peels the onions. "Telling a woman how to do things" has been man's favorite indoor sport, ever since Adam told Eve how to wind the fig leaves together with more speed and less effort.

• • •

ANY man can tell you how to clean the house by running a straw through it and blowing out the dirt. Or how to make a lovely chicken salad out of a slice of veal and a dill pickle.

• • •

But when God made the world co-ed, He made everything in it co-ed. So why can't these co-ed young couples divide the housework, according to sex and talents, just as most office work is divided? There is plenty of "man's work" as well as "woman's work" around any house.

• • •

There are some good men cooks, just as there are a few women blacksmiths. But the average man doesn't BELONG in the kitchen any more than the average woman belongs in a black[illegible] He just [illegible]

• • •

When a woman gets all through counting the laundry, darning the socks, washing the dishes, mending the linen and hanging over a gas range, there are still windows to be washed, floors to be polished, curtains to be put up, screens to be taken down, rugs to be swept and beaten, beds to be made, lawns to be mowed, gardens to be sprinkled and bathtubs to be scrubbed. All fine, strenuous, respectable HE-man exercise!

EVER SINCE ADAM TOLD EVE—

• • •

"Reciprocity" doesn't consist entirely in taking the poodle for a walk and powdering the little woman's back. But that's as far as some men will go—and they do even those things a little sheepishly.

• • •

That's why the modern househusband, who has discovered that "man's place is in the home" instead of in the speakeasy, is a gem of great price!

• • •

There is really nothing effeminate about cleaning house, making beds or even washing dishes. The doughboys who did it were not "effeminate"!

CHICAGO WORLD'S FAIR MUST DO BETTER THAN THE MOVIES

By GILBERT SELDES

I was reading Paul Morand's quick-running, entertaining account of 1900 (that is the name of the book, too) when something began to trouble me. He was describing the great Exposition in Paris and had come to those native villages, reproductions of the Taj Mahal, imitation canals of Venice, restaurants run by Cochin-Chinese and the like, when his way of telling his story began to seem a little imitative. Now Mr. Morand may have faults in style, but he is not an imitator; he is brilliant, his comparisons are vivid—yet I felt that I had read the thing before. And presently I knew that I hadn't read what he had written, but I had seen what he was writing about. Probably he intended this effect, for [illegible] the difference between 1900 and [illegible]

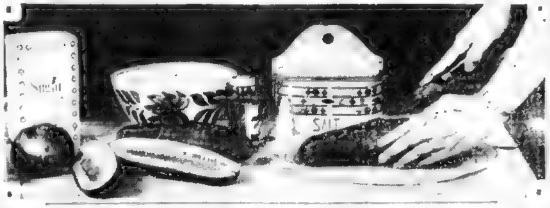
Cucumbers Need Not Be Passed Up

CUCUMBERS ARE GOOD FOR COMPANY



Stuffed Cucumbers are sure to intrigue the in-laws and earn an extra star in your culinary crown. It is a most appropriate dish.

Many Ways to Serve the Cucumber

What do cucumbers mean in your life? Just a convenient vegetable waiting to be sliced into vinegar or combined with tomato in the time-worn combination "salad"? Or worse, something to decline firmly, since for many the cucumber belongs to the tabooed family of "repeaters"?

Then hear ye, while I tell you how to remove the critter's fang. Peel your cucumber and then with a silver fork score deep vertical lines from stem to stern. Then drop your cucumber into a bowl of ice water. If you're going to serve it sliced, it will improve its crispness if the slicing is done now, and in some miraculous way much of the indigestibility seems to seep out into the ice water. At least.

FAITHFUL CHEAT

By Ruby M. Ayers

CASS LIKED Sondra and was [illegible] for her—she hadn't had [illegible]

ADDED TO PERPLEXITY

[illegible]

"And when you're able to be moved," she was saying gaily, "Mr. Anderson is going to lend us the little house I told you about, at the shore. It's lovely there, Mark, the sea is like champagne, and the air perfectly glorious. You'll soon be as well and strong as ever."

Mark smiled—"I feel a different man already, since I found you again, Sondra—It was rotten being ill, but all the time at the back of my mind there was an ungrateful sort of thought that if only I was ill enough, I might be sent home to you."

He looked a very different man [illegible] the one who had said goodbye [illegible] her a few short months ago [illegible] Sondra knew that every day he was gaining strength.

"It's only a question of time"—the doctors had told her. "His heart is naturally weak, but with rest and care he ought to get quite fit and well again."

QUEER SORT OF WEEK

It was a week since he had been brought home. A queer sort of week [illegible] had seemed to Sondra, and even [illegible] she had not grown used to being addressed as Mrs. Merriman or to the sight of the wedding ring on her finger.

It seemed a long cry back to that rainy morning at the pier and to her own dread of seeing Mark again, Sondra thought. And yet at the first moment of their meeting, pity for him, and a faint returning of the old love she had once felt, had chased all other emotion from her heart.

Since then she had many times tried to understand herself and had failed.

She knew that her heart and happiness were in John Anderson's keeping and yet she knew also that even if now he had been willing to take her away, she could not have left Mark.

"I suppose there are several kinds of love," she thought hopelessly. "Or else I'm not capable of loving one man with my whole heart."

Anderson had been to the nursing home several times, but she had never spoken with him alone. She had sat and watched him while he talked to Mark, a queer little pain in her heart, and yet she was always glad when he went away.

What's the use? What's the use? she asked herself hopelessly. I can't ever belong to him, and it's my own fault, so I might as well make the best of it.

THINGS NOT SO EASY

But it was a difficult best—at night when she went back to her rooms at Mrs. Sears', things were not so easy, and yet in her own unaccustomed way she tried to be brave, although always in her mind was the strange feeling that none of these happenings was real—that it was just a strange phase through which she was passing.

Then one evening when she had [illegible] Mrs. Sears [illegible] at the door.

"A lady to see you, Miss—" [illegible] without interest.

"Who is it?"

"Well—ask her to come up," Sondra said.

So few people came to these unpretentious rooms to see her that she naturally felt a little excited.

"The lady, miss—" Mrs. Sears said rather resentfully, and Sondra turned to face her sister.

There was a little silence, then Flora laughed.

"Behold how the mighty have fallen!" she said.

"Where have you been? And how did you find me?" Sondra asked. "And do come in and shut the door."

Flora obeyed and they stood looking at one another silently till Sondra asked again, "How did you find me?"

"I rang John Anderson and he told me."

"Oh—and did he tell you . . . that I am married?"

"Yes . . . you little fool, Sondra," Flora said. "I know you're married."

"What do you mean? . . ." she asked angrily. "I thought you of all people would approve of a romantic love match."

"Love match!" Flora shrugged her shoulders. "You don't love Mark any more than I love Ben, and yet——" she paused a moment, then added half defiantly, "I'm going back to him."

"Going—back to him?"

"Yes—" Flora took off her hat and tossed it aside. "I'm sick of poverty and independence," she said in a hard voice . . . "Wait till you've tried it for a month or two with Mark, and you'll hate it as much as I do. We're not meant to be the wives of poor men, Sondra. Patrick was right."

SONDRA STARED

Sondra [illegible] her wide eyes. She had [illegible] a good deal about her sister [illegible] thought of her with admiration and now, after all, she was going back to Ben.

"You needn't stare like that," Flora said calmly. "You ought to be glad. It will make things better for you. I suppose you haven't any money, as you're living in this awful place . . . Sondra, why in heaven's name did you marry Mark Merriman?"

"You're not going to tell me you care for him?"

Sondra winced. "Yes . . . in a way I do . . . I married him anyway."

"And John Anderson?"

"I've learned a lot since I waved the flag of independence in Ben's face, and in a way I'm glad . . ." she laughed. "Because now I'm quite willing to go back to feather-bed luxury."

"And Ben?" Sondra asked blankly.

"I wrote to him at his bankers and they sent it on to him—he's still away. He sent me a cable, and he's on his way home."

"He wants you back?"

Flora's lip curled. "I believe he'd take me if I'd committed every sin in the Bible."

"And—Joselyn?"

LOOK OF PAIN

For a moment a look of pain crossed Flora's face, then she laughed again. "That's all over . . . He wouldn't have me. I don't believe in love any more. Money's the only thing worth having in life, I've come to that conclusion."

She looked round the unpretentious room.

"And so you're going to live like this the rest of your life," she said. "I wonder."

Sondra said defiantly: "When Mark is well again, John is going to find him another job. Of course he can't go back to the [illegible]—"

"John is going to find him a job! I call that very noble of him," Flora said cynically.

There was an eloquent silence, then Flora said:—

"So you're in love with him . . . you poor kid." For the first time there was a touch of genuine emotion in her voice.

"I'm not in love with him"—Sondra said defiantly. "I'm like you . . . I don't believe in love."

"And now we're both lying," Flora said. She laughed. "I wonder what will become of us, Sondra?"

She got up suddenly and crossing the room, laid both hands on her sister's shoulders. "Look at me," she said.

"And some day you'll run away—as I did," Flora said. "Only unlike me, you'll have someone to run to—someone who won't send you away."

LIPS QUIVERED

Sondra's lips quivered into a [illegible]

"He wouldn't have me. I married Mark because I wanted to, and John says . . . it's cowardly to turn one's back on a mistake."

"How long has John been such a moralist?"

"I don't know . . . but I think he's right," Sondra said. "I married Mark because I wanted him . . . and so I shall stay with him as long as he wants me."

* * *

Mark Merriman looked at his watch for the twentieth time in half an hour. Sondra was late. As a rule she came to see him directly after lunch, but it was now a quar[illegible] of her in the quiet street which his window overlooked.

It was a warm sunny day, and for the first time Mark was partially dressed and sitting in an easy chair.

As the maid left, Blondie went [illegible] turned on some dreamy music. As the chauffeur entered she said "Take these up to my mother and [illegible] and this note. You can take them around the park if they care to go. [illegible] won't need you until theatre time."

HEARD LARRY'S VOICE

"I am in to Mr. Belmont," she told the butler as he passed the drawing room door. An instant later she heard Larry's voice:

"Miss McClune . . ."

"Yes, sir," Blondie heard the butler say, and then she slipped quickly into her bedroom preparatory to making a proper and effective entrance.

Larry strolled into the drawing room and looking around appraised every article of the furnishings with an experienced eye. As he was doing this Blondie gave a final touch to her makeup at the dressing table and entered the drawing room.

"I received your telegram and I came," said Larry, looking at her closely.

"That was very nice of you . . . will you sit down?"

"Tea or a drink?"

"I was reading about your polo on Sunday . . ."

"I was reading your little advertisement in the paper this evening, too bad." Larry looked at her in frank disappointment, and then said sharply, "I have plenty to say to you, young lady."

"I've something to say, too—but there's someone coming, so if you don't mind being bored with me, I won't discuss it until they're here."

"Okay—Got an evening paper?"

"Tea and the evening paper!" Blondie said to the butler who had entered. Then to Larry: "It's [illegible] now . . ."

"Since when?" he interrupted.

"I haven't spoken to Lurline since then . . ."

"Neither have I!"

"I don't hold any grudge against Lurline . . ."

"I should hope not! You should be very grateful to her . . . she introduced you to the larger life!"

"Well, that's that . . ." and Larry took the paper from the butler who was fixing the tea things, and opened it. "The market's going crazy these days . . ." he said, as he scanned the financial page.

GETTING WISE

"You're getting wise!"

"I have always been wise."

"Yes, I think you have," and there was a mocking tone in Larry's voice as he glanced around the room. Blondie, busy at the tea table now, pretended not to notice the sneer.

"Sugar?" she asked.

"One."

"Cream?"

"Lord, no."

"Toast?"

"Is it cinnamon?"

"I think so."

"What do you mean—you think so . . . I can smell it from here . . ."

"Say, I haven't very long," said Larry, impetuously. "What's on your mind . . ."

(From the L. L. of the B. H.)

- 2 eggs
- ½ tsp. salt
- 3 tps. cream or evaporated milk
- 1 tbsp. sugar
- ½ tsp. mustard
- 4 tbsps. vinegar.

Beat the eggs well, add the cream and the dry ingredients mixed thoroughly together. Beat well with the egg beater and add the vinegar. Cook in a double boiler until creamy, perhaps ten minutes, stirring all the time. This can be thinned if desired.

TICKER TICKS AFFECT LIFE EVERYWHERE

By B. C. FORBES

Shawnee on Delaware, Pa., Aug. 16.—This is being written amid mountains recalling the Sunday school hymn of boyhood days, "Rock of Ages," and the incomparable twenty-third psalm, "The Quiet Waters By." Here stand eternal hills, the same yesterday, today, forever, clad in trees, shrubs, grass, flowers, a broad tranquil river moving [illegible] towards its ocean destiny. Cattle browse [illegible] a tinkle-tinkle reminiscent of an old-fashioned village [illegible].

Arthur G. Flynn of Jamaica Plain, Essex County newspaper publisher, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Secretary of State.

Flynn, who made his political bow two years ago, was a runner-up for the same office to which he now aspires.

A member of the Alfred [illegible] publicity board in the [illegible] 1924 presidential fight, Flynn points to his executive connections with newspapers in Boston, Lynn, Lawrence and Salem as the source of necessary experience for the post he seeks.

In his fight two years ago Flynn carried Essex County three to one and his strong showing in other counties prompted his entrance into the fight again.

That constructive operators are talking about a close approach to the high of last week. They seem determined in their attempts to keep stock prices going forward and success is likely to be theirs just as long as liquidation is absent. Apparently they have little to fear on this score, as many weak spots have been bolstered, either through the rise or by judicious lightening of accounts.

American Telephone, which meets for dividend action on Wednesday, will probably declare the usual $2.25 quarterly dividend. —SPECTATOR— Says:

The market gave indications of having recovered from last week's shakeout, and its action was strongly suggestive of higher prices today. The tip-off came in the complete absence of pressure when the Du Pont dividend cut was announced. From this it would appear that stocks have had sufficient correction. With some help from higher commodity prices, the market could easily rise to last week's tops. Then the test will come.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Paine, Webber & Co.—From here on, market observers will watch industrial news carefully for straws pointing toward actual expansion of activity, but, in our opinion the market has not yet by any means discounted the prospect of early betterment of business. Rising commodity prices are likely to continue to be the primary bullish influence on share prices.

Theodore Prince & Co.—We do not feel that, on the whole, last week's reaction was substantial enough and we would await developments before replacing lines that were liquidated during last week's strength.

Shields & Co.—It is likely to be comparatively dull until new bullish influence becomes emphasized, but while it remains as orderly as in yesterday's session there will be an increasing amount of new buying attracted that will warrant expectation of resumption of the advance in the not distant future.

STOCKS HIGHER IN LIVELIER DEALINGS

New York, Aug. 16—Important shares sold up 1 to 7 points on the New York Stock Exchange today in livelier dealings, with blocks of 100 to 10,000 shares appearing on the tape from time to time. There was some profit-taking in the afternoon which reduced some of the gains a point or two.

The bullish forces again appeared to be in full control in Wall St.

STAMPEDE OF BUYING

Heartened by yesterday's rally following the shake-out at the end of last week, traders staged a buying stampede at the opening. Huge blocks of stock poured out and the ticker was swamped, falling 7 minutes behind.

The biggest gains were made in the forenoon as the shorts were driven to cover. Allied Chemical jumped 7 points and U. S. Steel nearly 5 points. Gains of 1 to 4 were general among leading stocks like N. Y. Central, American Telephone, Westinghouse, American Tobacco B, American Can, Atchison, Union Pacific, Western Union, Air Reduction, R. H. Macy, Consolidated Gas and DuPont.

The uprush brought in heavy profit-taking. Although part of the gain was given up, the market continued to display a strong undertone. Rails provided leadership and went to new highs on the move.

SEAT VALUES SOAR

New York Stock Exchange seat values followed stock prices as arrangements were made for the sale of a membership at $150,000, a gain of $30,000 over the last previous sale. The present price compares with a high of $175,000 and a low of $68,000 two months ago.

The all-time high for exchange seats was established in 1929, when a membership sold for $625,000, including rights.

Renewed strength of railway issues gave a buoyant tone to the bond market and prices in all categories moved forward in active trading.

While principal attention was centered on the low-priced, speculative carriers, the higher grade loans were not neglected. Sound gains were also recorded by various utilities. The industrials, however, were somewhat quiet and steady.

The upturn of the transportation list was credited, partly, to reports that a number of roads with maturities next year are planning refunding operations, with the aid of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

CURB MARKET UTILITIES UP

New York, Aug. 16—Buying of public utilities featured trading in the curb market today. Many stocks showed gains of 1 to 2 points. Activity was greater than yesterday.

Electric Bond & Share was an active feature, opening at an advance of around 2 points and holding this gain steadily. It was quoted around 24 to 25. United Light & Power A stock was also in demand, gaining a full point. American Gas & Electric, Cities Service common and Commonwealth Edison were firm.

There was fairly strong buying of leading oil stocks, particularly Gulf and Standard of Indiana. Curtis Manufacturing A sold around its best price of the move.

Niagara Hudson Power advanced fairly vigorously in active buying as the session progressed. It passed 15 for a gain of over a point.

Deposit Time for 'Frisco Extended

Time for depositing St. Louis-San Francisco Railway securities under readjustment plan has been extended to August 29. Approximately $100,000,000 in bonds, or 40 per cent of the total amount of bonds affected by the plan, have been deposited.

"The plan cannot be consummated without substantially unanimous consent of bondholders and unless deposits indicating reasonable prospect of such assent are obtained prior to September 1, the railway company will have no alternative but to default payment of $2,436,000 interest due at that time on the consolidated bonds, Series A, and consent to appointment of receivers of its property," the statement of the committe declares.

Unfilled Orders for Mills Larger

New York, Aug. 16—The domestic cotton mill situation has undergone a substantial improvement within the past month, which became very pronounced this past week, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service. Sales of cotton cloth were greatly in excess of the current output, resulting in a running down of stocks and an increase of unfilled orders.

Silk Mill Workers Get Pay Increase

Sidney, N. Y., Aug. 16—Employes of Butterfly Silk Mill were given wage increases of 5 per cent to 15 per cent. Vice-pres. Reines said the increases resulted from firmer trade conditions and were given to offset past reductions. He said the Butterfly mill was increasing its employes.

Commodity and Stocks Movements Studied

New York, Aug. 16—Students of major price swings are watching the movements of commodities, bonds and stocks in an effort to gauge whether they have as yet given any definite indications of a turn in the tide. So far, evidence of any important change in business is lacking, but bonds and raw material commodity prices have shown definite signs of strength over a period of two months.

The first sign that the country was emerging from the 1920-1921 period of depression was given by the bond market. The real upswing in the bond market started in June, 1921, and prices worked steadily higher from that level. In August, 1921, sensitive comomdity prices started to work higher and moved up steadily in succeeding months. The index of all commodities prepared by the Department of Labor did not reach its low point until January, 1922, but pushed ahead swiftly from then on.

The bond market first gave signs of a change in trend in early June this year. A brief rally occurred in the first week of the month, and the Dow-Jones average of 40 corporation issues so far has not gone below the bottom set June 1. Commodity prices, measured by Fisher's Index, set their low so far on June 17 and since then have moved up about 2½ points.

Western Pacific's Deficit Announced

Washington, Aug. 16—Western Pacific Railroad reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission for June a deficit after taxes and charges of $364,203, against a deficit of $204,499 on June 30, 1931. Six months' deficit was $1,815,846, against a deficit of $1,728,103 in corresponding period of 1931.

British Conversion Large

London, Aug. 16—Initial or "cash bonus" stage of British operation to convert £2,068,977,258 of five per cent war loan bonds to a 3½ per cent basis resulted in £1,850,000,000, or $6,447,000,000 at current rates, being converted. Amount for which requests for payment in cash on Dec. 1 have been received is £48,000,000 or only 2.8 per cent. This leaves £188,977,258, fate of which must be decided by holders some time between now and end of December. Results are held in London to have surpassed all expectations.

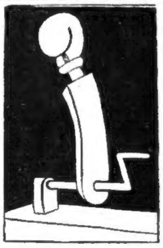
Science and Invention



Today it gives us great pleasure to introduce the Doakes Voting Machine invented by Gussie V. Doakes, who thinks while he sits and sits while he thinks. Hearing that the leaders of the nation were trying to think of ways and means of getting out the vote, Mr. Doakes decided that many people failed to vote because they didn't want to vote. A special feature of the Doakes device is a large substantial crank which can be turned to register unqualified disapproval of all the candidates.

The Voice ◆ of ◆ Broadway

—By Louis Sobol—

Down Memory Lane! With Norma Talmdage.

One of my earliest recollections is playing hookey from school—School No. 92 in Brooklyn, to be exact—to go to Prospect Park witih a gang of kids to play theater, the only outdoor theater I ever played in. My heart was already set on being a moving picture actress, and youngster though I was, I already believed that I could always get what I set my heart on. I didn't know when or how the opportunity would first present itself, and when it did, I didn't realize it was the chance I'd been eagerly hoping for.

I was 14 then, with brown curls billowing almost to my elbows. We were terribly poor, the five of us, Peg and Fred—we always called father and mother by their first names—Connie, Natalie and myself living in a three-room flat that was given us rent-free by friends. Father was away most of the time, on the road, selling advertising. Out of his meager earnings we eked enough for food, heat and clothing.

The chance came for me to supplement our income by posing for slide photographers. My pay was to be $3 for each slide. The slides were used in the little five-and-ten-cent movie houses to furnish color for the squeaky sopranos and terrible tenors who entertained the early picture fans.

Years later Irving Berlin and I were talking over early days. I started to sing a line from the first lyric I had illustrated:

"Anchor right at Cupid's door."

"You remember it, too!" I ejaculated in surprise. "Remember it!" he laughed, "why I wrote it!"

I though we were on the way to fame and fortune when I made about 100 pictures the first week. But the pay check was only nine dollars—it was three dollars for each song!

But it was valuable experience because I learned how to stand and pose in front of a camera, and it was the means of my acquiring a screen education. For with my earnings the whole family would go to the nearest nickelodeons. And we'd stay in them until the ushers put us out to make room for other customers.

Harry Mayo was casting director. I didn't think anything would come of the interview, but several days later, sure enough, a call came.

My first picture—and my greatest thrill—was an atrocity called "The Four Footed Pest." A horse had the leading role, one of those trick horses. The only part of me that appeared on the finished print was the back of my head. It took half a day to make the picture. Constance made her debut in the same picture, as one of the crowd of little girls.

My heroine at that time was Florence Turner, and I got my second thrill when she personally handed me my pay envelope containing two dollars and fifty cents for the day's work. For besides starring, she assisted her mother in the wardrobe department and had charge of the extra payroll.

Then came my first real role. As the daughter of Florence Turner in a Civil War thriller titled the Dixie Mother. Carlyle Blackwell and Charles Kent were in that film. Though we rehearsed the whole thing dozens of times, my feet wouldn't budge when Charles Kent, who was directing, shouted the order to shoot. I was literally pushed into my first role by the impatient Mr. Kent, and before I knew it I was actually acting before the camera.

Even Peg did some acting in those days, because if one member of the family got on the payroll they all came with her. Lillian Walker and Anita Stewart were getting their baptism in films about the same time, and their mothers also came with them.

If you think films are hoity-toity and present great drama today, they're not nearly as highbrow as they were then. For William Shakespeare was one of the most famous scenarists of those early years. And Lady MacBeth, Juliet, Rosalind and the rest of the Shakespearean retinue was familiar figures in Flatbush at Vitagraph.

We were as anonymous as Sing Sing residents in those days. Florence Turner was known as the Vitagraph Girl Maurice Costello as "the man with the dimples," and Mary Pickford, who was at Biograph, as "the girl with the curls." The names audiences knew us by were the names we bore in the screen drama.

Most of them had to supplement their incomes by outside work, and it sometimes was in odd contrast to their screen occupations. One comedian, I remember, was an undertaker.

Of the directors, I remember the names of Van Dyke Book, Charles Kent, Larry Trimble, John Adolfi, Monsieur Alberteri, Ralph Ince, Albert W. Hale, Bert Angeles, Monsieur St. Louis and William Humphreys.

In those days realism would be stretched a point or two. I remember when Viola, the Vitagraph cow, was cast for a bull in Carmen. But her bovine disposition held up the action for a half day until an ingenious property man arranged an electric seat for Viola.

Mabel Normand was on the set, too, and always full of the devil. In one picture we resented the smallness of the roles we were to play, that of two young Negro slave girls. Mabel hit on the idea of blacking only our faces and the front of our necks. They didn't discover it until they started to film our scene, and we were unceremoniously hustled off the lot for the day.

Those were hectic—as the word's now used—days. I remember one afternoon when Florence Turner wrote a screen adaptation in two and a half hours. Of the old Stephen Phillips tear-jerker, Paolo and Francesca. She wrote it so rapidly that in one of the sequences she had Maurice Costello returning from battle all dressed up in a velvet court costume. In the same picture we had a marble floor, imitation, with as many wrinkles as a carelessly tossed rug. It was just heavy linen, painted to look like marble.

WHO IS THE MOON KILLER?

RADIO FOLK MARK TIME

Fall and Winter Schedules Tardy

By N. F. T.

Optimism prevails among broadcasting celebrities as summer days and nights begin to wane. Even so, renewed entertainment effort is likely to be a bit later getting up full steam this year, as against previous fall and winter seasons. Doings on the dial will hardly be in full swing for 1932-33 audiences until Columbus Day, whereas Labor Day has heretofore found an almost maximum momentum attained.

BIG PARADE FORMING

As may be imagined, Ben Bernie, Bing Crosby, Russ Columbo, Morton Downey and Tony Wons, not to mention a host of others, are busy building their individual radio fences. Meanwhile, money paid to most of them for personal appearances behind footlights has come in very nicely. Back on the business end of a microphone, however, is where they must keep on making good. All of us who listen shall determine success or failure for them in the long run. How well they know it!

* * *

Rumor has it how Morton Downey has definitely decided to steer clear of any six-time weekly offering. Once or twice between Monday and Sunday has become his idea of all he should attempt.

* * *

Myrt and Marge will again take on their old CBS spot at 7 o'clock nightly soon to oppose those two grand old young men, Amos 'n' Andy. Stars may come and stars may go, but the two blackface boys continue marching to the "mike" nightly all year 'round.

MOONLIGHT MURDERER-OOO!

Listeners who like their loudspeaker thrill embroidered horribly will probably hasten to tune in a preview of the new talkie release, "Dr. X," as arranged for tonight (WAAB) at 8:15. One of those fiendish characters holds forth throughout. In any event his depredations are to be outlined in detail. They term him "The Moon Killer," because he commits his crimes by moonlight. So the story goes, adapted from the film, "Dr. X," due to open here at the Metropolitan Theater come Friday. Try this one on your nerves.

Tomorrow night brings together all the radio amateurs of Boston and vicinity for a turkey supper at one of our well known downtown eating places. These are the chaps who operate hundreds of small independent transmitters of their own, communicating not only between themselves, but with other lone voices all over the world. Enthusiasm for radio, all that it means and may ever come to, is not more pronounced in the ranks of professionals anywhere than when amateurs assemble. Tonight marks the first official gathering of their newly formed New England association.

LOCAL LATHER

Sam Ross, recently appointed Artist Bureau boss for NBC in New England, now back at his Hotel Bradford desk after two weeks away, eager to explore Hub talent jungles for future studio stars . . . An amusing simile is one coined by Jack Brinkley, former WTIC and WNAC staff man now with WLOE. Jack opines: "Nothing sounds so strained as an effort to achieve native Southern accent, put forth by a Boston school of expression student . . . Ben Alley finds a crowd of admirers all around him at Loew's Orpheum Theater stage door every afternoon and night when he makes ready to leave. So does Kate Smith at RKO Keith's, and any group assembled around ample Katherine is SOME crowd, you'll agree . . . Subscriber Saunders of Cambridge says we radio column guys should get busy and campaign for a program pickup from the rear of most any Chinese laundry—imagine! If some sponsor wants humor, Mr. Saunders insists he knows a shirt button buster of Oriental origin who is funnier than any comedian now current on the air . . . The Gossipers were great last night as Jack Shannon and Marie Stoddard . . . Books written by or about broadcasters seem as scarce as new jokes this year . . . May nothing interfere with you and you, your next door neighbors as well as folks across the street, when time comes to tune in on "Jack and Jane of Sweetheart Lane" tonight (WBZ) between 8:30 and 8:45. They have some swell songs and patter in store.

In Wonderful Chicago

CHICAGO BUSINESS GIRLS ENJOY THEMSELVES

This picture, reproduced from the Chicago Herald-Examiner, shows that Chicago is the happy land for ladies that work in skyscrapers that this photograph reveals.

Chicago's city government has the strange idea that the waterfront should be made useful and pleasant to all Chicago inhabitants.

Chicago also entertains a conviction—that public parks should be run for the benefit of all citizens, for their amusement and comfort, not merely as pretty places in which the more prosperous can drive in their automobiles or ride on horseback.

They attend to their duties, typewriting or managing the office, and at noon, when it is warm, they change to the costumes which you see here, take a walk along the edge of the lake, a swim in the cool water, then a brief luncheon and back to work.

They are too wise to bathe AFTER eating. You should NEVER do that—it always causes indigestion, damages health and is apt to cause dangerous cramps.

This picture will be reproduced not only in the Boston Evening American but in many other Hearst newspapers throughout the country. It is printed to let the Mayors of other cities see what can be done to make the people of a big city happy, if you really take the trouble, and if you happen to believe that lakes and parks are made for the crowd—not for the FEW.

This will interest Mayor Curley especially, because it will remind him of the wonderful things that could be done and that he would LIKE to do with the waterfront of Boston, especially the North and the West End where the poor mothers live with their children.

We are particularly fortunate, in Boston, because of the contiguity of splendid bathing beaches stretching from Provincetown and the Cape on the South to York, in Maine, on the North.

But you don't get to these beaches as a rule unless you own an automobile or unless you can afford the day and the expense which must be consumed in traveling back and forth on the steamer or the railway. How much more thoughtful and considerate we could be called if we developed some bathing beaches on the Boston shore from the Charles River Basin to the Harbor in South Boston in which the children of the tenement districts could take their daily dip and to which the workingman could repair when he returns from the arduous work of the shop or factory.

This could be done by pumping salt water from the Harbor into the little parks and idle lands behind the shore. Shallow bathing pools for little children could be arranged, and shelters to which the mothers could take their children in case of storm and in which they could find running warm water and opportunity to change the very young baby's clothes when necessary.

All that does not exist at present, and in Boston thousands live literally at the edge of the ocean who rarely see the ocean or enjoy the benefits of salt-water bathing. And they are the ones that need it most.

Mayor Curley knows this. The knowledge distresses him and he wishes that he could do for the crowd in Boston what the Chicago city government does for the crowd on the edge of Lake Michigan.

New York Day by Day

Incomes of Writers

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—This is not a pretty pastel of the literary work but it comes from an earnest, distinguished man of letters. As such, it should be of special interest to ambitious writers, so many of whom write about their hopes and fears. Here it is:

"I do not believe there are in the world today more than 200 men and women making enormous money, writing. When I say enormous money, I am thinking of something around $100,000 a year. This is not so big in big professions—law, banking, medicine and even among movie stars.

"I know perhaps a thousand famous writers, poets and artists who, when not in galling poverty, are in shabby-genteel, just-getting-along niches of life. Most of them have aching worries regarding the future and a dependent old age. Take yourself as a fairly conspicuous example.

"You are a protagonist of the modern whirl. I do not know your income, although I suspect it is rather large. Yet if, as in the old days before the syndication, you were paid by a single newspaper, the returns would be comparatively insignificant. Not more than $5000 a year at top-most.

"Well, illiterate gag men, brewing sewage combustion from the gutters, make thrice that working for a single firm in Hollywood. Richard Harding Davis, who with Irvin Cobb and Frank Ward O'Malley, was one of the three best reporters, left about $3000. In any other calling he would have amassed $500,000.

"But for sales and resales of movie rights after death there would be no estate. Our benign government does not encourage the writer, whose professional life is ten years. It taxes him, and unjustly, more than big business which, incidentally, put America in the rightful dilemma she is in today.

* * *

"Such a gloriously magnificent writer as Don Marquis has been lured—and who can blame him?—from literature by fancy salaries of the movies. One of his talented and devoted admirers once wrote: 'O rare Don Marquis; Devout and ribald spirit, he has also known the Tavern of Despair, whose fireside bench is well polished by many old customers.' Don, in Hollywood, found making a living a minor technique. His 'tavern of despair' today is a Spanish castle with flaming awnings and a patio. To literature's eternal loss!

* * *

"I am not embittered. You, I think, know that. I have educated my children in the best colleges and launched them successfully in life. I have a good home and live well. I am known as a writer, but most of my income has come from sidelines. Save for my multiple outside activities, I could not have made more than $5000 a year. Thus have I gone adventuring with many cargoes, and I have worked from 12 to 14 hours a day for 25 years.

* * *

"There is no money writing books, and how many playwrights wind up in the opulence of the banker, some of whom are proving crooks.

* * *

"I saw all this years ago, and decided to scatter my fire. I have written books, plays and even newspaper columns, and I have never written a line of which I was ashamed. Yet my biggest income has come through writing advertisement booklets, brochures for varied commercial activities, but they took too much out of me. I could have written far better books without such a millstone around my neck.

* * *

"Finally, let no one envy the so-called famous novelist or playwright. I have passed three along the street within the past six months. They were riding the big breaker in their day, yet it would be a strain for most people to recall them today. Europe remembers its writers by public squares and pensions and streets named for them. In America we pay this deference to the Jimmy Walkers."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Afraid of One Thing!

I AM AFRAID
Of one thing only—
I am afraid
Of Myself.

I am no longer
Afraid of sickness,
Nor of poverty,
Nor of injustice,
Nor of slander,
Nor of loneliness,
Nor of hate,
Nor of weariness,
Nor of failure,
Nor of shame;
Once I feared
These things—but now
They have all happened,
And I have discovered
Their secret;
I do not fear them
Any more.

Elsie Robinson

I am not afraid
Of growing old—
There's the sharpest fear
For most women—
But I saw
Old Age coming
And beat it
To the clinch—
So I'm not afraid
Of growing old.

I'm not even afraid
Of Death, any more—
Of Death taking
What I loved most.
I was afraid of that
For so long—
But it's over.
It has happened.
Death has given me
The works.
I'm not afraid
Of Death, any more.

Now I am afraid
Of one thing only—
I am afraid of Myself.

I am afraid of
The things in myself—
The meanness, the lies,
The cowardice, the greed,
The conceit and self-pity,
The malice and laziness,
The dirtiness and cruelty,
The stupidity and rage,
In myself.
I am afraid
Of these things.

FOR I HAVE DISCOVERED THAT THESE THINGS ALONE HAVE POWER OVER ME.

The other things
Which I feared—
The outside things—
They have no power
Unless I give them power
By letting them in.
No matter how frightful
They may seem,
I can take them,
Or leave them—
It's up to me.
BUT THE THINGS IN MYSELF,
THEY ARE WITH ME, ALWAYS.
THEY ARE REAL—
THEY / RE MYSELF—
AND AS LONG AS THEY CONTINUE,
I AM IN THEIR POWER.

I am in
My own power.
In the power of
My own goodness,
Or my own badness;
I can send myself
To hell—or heaven.
I, alone,
Am responsible
For what I am and
For where I go.

I am afraid
Of one thing only—
I am afraid
Of my own power
Over Myself . . .

Just Folks

Capt. Charles C. Anderson

Coast Guard Captain Anderson, sitting by the fire
Through the blustery days of March after you retire,
If you think of us at night kneeling down to pray,
Many, many, many times this is what we'll say:
"Lord, we thank You for his strength and his courage rare,
Heard her call and went to her and brought her safe to shore—
Coast Guard Captain Anderson—bless him, more and more."

Coast Guard Captain Anderson, never shall you know
All the debt of gratitude which to you we owe,
But whenever Janet smiles through the years to be,
Yours the strength which kept that smile safe for us to see!
And whenever Janet laughs, "Yours the strength," we'll say,
Joy had turned to tragedy, Captain, but for you!"

Coast Guard Captain Anderson, sitting by the fire
Through the blustery days of March after your retire,
It may be your record long few will stop to read,
But upon our hearts there's stamped one remembered deed.
Service files may merely show duty always done,
In our memories you'll dwell courageous to the end—

Better Trade Sentiment Sets Stage for Real Relief for the Jobless

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

THE gains in the security markets represent the return of hope and courage, which had been oozed out of the price structure.

In the last analysis, the justification of any price structure will hinge on corporate earnings. These, in turn, depend on fundamental balancing the needs of the country against its great facilities for production.

The soundness of any "managed recovery" will depend on THE RETURN OF IDLE MEN AND WOMEN TO PRODUCTIVE PAYROLLS.

Any discounting of such a development without the consummation of practical plans to absorb the unemployed will lead only to disappointment and loss.

The rally in the markets represents the striking up of the band to the tune of economic recovery, but the real test will come when the shock troops of business are called upon to march.

* * *

THE administration, which at times had been content to let nature take its course, however unseemly, no longer assumes that negative philosophic attitude. It doubtless feels that unless genuine relief comes before election day, nature will take its course under Democratic auspices.

Hence its growing eagerness, through a bond pool and through a proposed commodity pool, to quicken the recuperative processes.

A RECOVERY, WHICH IS BASED SOLELY ON MARKING UP PRICES, WILL OF COURSE PROVE EPHEMERAL.

The price advance and the improvement of sentiment are, however, necessary forerunners of far-reaching economic gains, BUT THEY MUST BE SUPPORTED BY SOLID JOB-CREATING PROJECTS.

The stage is set for an effective use of a LARGE SCALE PROGRAM OF CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC WORKS.

But unfortunately, still seized by the spirit of panic while Congress remained in session, PRESIDENT Hoover SHIED AWAY from the very type of public works relief which SECRETARY Hoover had ARDENTLY SPONSORED in 1923.

But, despite coolness in the White House, Congress in the Garner-Wagner Relief Act, put through a provision authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend up to $1,500,000,000 for self-liquidating public and semi-public construction projects.

Given enthusiastic and courageous prompt ENFORCEMENT, this provision could throw the balance of economic forces on the side of business recovery.

* * *

WITH an equilibrium established in business in recent months at a level of maximum depression, which means suffering and privation for millions of American families, the balance can be tilted toward genuine recuperation through launching a program for constructing capital goods.

Such a use of public funds is far more socially justifiable than advances by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to bail out private bankers of bonds in which they lost faith.

A MANIPULATED, STOCK TICKER PROSPERITY IS NOT ENOUGH.

The rebirth of faith in American economic institutions should promptly be followed up by private and public credit policies, which will make for an immediate expansion in CONSTRUCTION WORK, SO THAT LARGE NUMBERS MAY BE REDEEMED FROM IDLENESS.

Legion's Fine Program

Veterans Demand Action

Hail the American Legion of Massachusetts.

2—Denouncing the brutal and un-American treatment of the Bonus Expeditionary Forces at Washington.

3—Demanding immediate relief from the evils of prohibition by substitution of a regulated traffic in liquors that will promote true temperance.

We have heard it said that our American Legion didn't want their bonuses paid to them and that they looked upon the war veterans who went to Washington as "a gang of Bolshevists."

Well, the country now knows how they feel about it. They said it in words that can be understood.

And don't forget, they are our New England boys—our sons and our brothers. And they are not "Red," no matter what anybody says. You know THAT.

We Rejoice With Anne

Out of the suspense, the pain and, at last, the blessed happiness, of childbirth, a new baby has come to Charles and Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

It is a boy.

So was the other, of lamented memory.

Cruel man may take away, but God, in his generosity, gives back—another little boy, sweet and pure and lovely, to fill the void that had been brought into their home.

The Meanest Thief Yet

Perhaps that is why the names of dead men (of men actually dead and buried) have been presented to the city of Boston for charity, welfare funds.

But when a person goes to City Hall and collects the charity dole on the name of a man who has been taken from this mortal sphere he puts himself in the class of being about the cheapest thief unhung.
